I dunno. All I know is it went dead in the lane 2nd from the left in congested traffic and I did not want to be the impediment that made it worse. Put it in first, let out the clutch and ground on the starter until I got to the shoulder.

Interesting, over the years I have had a mechanical failure in traffic, usually I pop the door, put a shoulder to the door frame and begin pushing ... people usually show up and help me push it off the shoulder, etc.

But then, I am not so butt ugly that when I exit my vehicle everyone flees the vicinity ... just darn lucky, I guess. :-)

Cars didn't always have all these safety interlock systems. Even well into the 80's (and possibly beyond that), it was still possible to start your car without depressing the brake pedal. Many stick shifts didn't even have a neutral safety switch, so if you forgot you were in gear and turned the key, you would get a surprise lurch forward. And, horror of horrors, if one of the kids kicked the shifter while climbing into the back seat, there was nothing to keep it from going from drive to reverse (though in an automatic it would usually just make a horrible clattering noise because the gears could not sync with the car in motion).

I could hook a little plastic pipe to one of the water inlet pipes to my bathroom sink and let the little plastic pipe be between the comode seat and the porcelain comode.I would put a plastic elbow on there to get the right angle.Just reach and turn on the water a little.I might try that out.

Did that today for an SUV that stopped dead in the middle of 3 lanes just before the overpass of a cloverleaf.
Walked up, told the woman to turn the key to unlock the steering and put it in neutral
Then I started pushing
Suddenly there were 4 other guys also pushing
She was off the bridge and to the side.
Trooper showed up just as we started walking back to our cars Amazingly, there were some idiots who were upset that all 3 lanes were stopped because 3 of the drivers were lined up across 3 lanes behind the stalled SUV.. :-) Goes to show how stupid some people can be.
The trooper even had something to say to one of the upset idiots who was honking away while the helpers were getting back in their cars.
Pulled him to the side and let him stew while he took care of the woman in the SUV.

Many (many) moons ago, someone did me a favor. When I asked him how I could repay him for it, he suggested that I pass on the favor to 2 other people. AND WHENEVER ASKED about payback, just suggest doing 2 back and explain how the system works.

He then explained to me that using that system gives the following results.
1) Somehow, when you start doing this, people will start doing you favors unasked.
2) After a while, you will end up owing so many favors that you will be unable to repay all of them in your lifetime
3) As a result, you will stop thinking about doing favors and just do them whenever the opportunity arises

It took me about 3 years of consciously looking for opportunities to do favors to realize that
a) People are doing me favors unasked
b) I've accrued far more credit than debit of favors
c) At the rate I'm getting favors, there's no way I will be able to pay back the accrued debt of favors

So I just stopped sweating it and do them as they come.
And whenever asked give the little speech about doing 2 back.

Users who buy systems that ship with no way to turn secure boot off, and only Microsoft's key installed, will not be able to load Linux or any other non-Microsoft operating system. Users who buy systems that allow secure boot to be disabled, but only Microsoft's key installed, will have to give up the rootkit protection secure boot offers if they want to run unsigned operating systems or drivers.

Again, enterprise IT professionals should let their OEMs know that they want the choice and control in their own hands, and not in the operating system vendor's. You shouldn't have to give up the benefits of secure boot to have authority over your own fleet of PCs.

At least some of the Toyota Tacomas and a couple of the earlier Toyota trucks have a switch on the clutch pedal to ensure it is depressed when the starter is engaged. I had two of them....an 2002 Tacoma and a 1994 Pickup.....both had the switch. One gave me a problem till I adjusted it.

Exactly.....these 'safety' switches came about in the late 80s....early 90s...probably because some bozo in the government did just as you described above and spilled his coffee. Soon we will probably have some device to keep you from driving off with the cup of coffee on the top of the car where you put it while digging out your keys. (That is a generic you not a you personally, Brenda (VBG))

In one of the arab countries, I have heard/read, for drunk driving they simply pull you out of the car and shoot you beside it ... why couldn't we pass such a law for criminal public servants. If they want a fair trial, pull over the first 12 motorists which are passing by and hold it right there ... then the execution. I mean, they have a right to swift justice ...

This is the first I have heard of it!

I really can't imagine a moron/idiot/imbecile/etc. stoopid enough to purchase it, but they keep coming out with upgrades daily, it seems, not of hardware -- but I mean MORONS!

Like nancy said, just say NO!

We used to do free classes in installing/using Linux, I have participated in many on the local Jr. college campuses here ... I guess that has been stopped? Time to re-start that! With Ubuntu any windows idiot can use linux ... immediately, out of the box! And, not only is it just as good (except for most games, but then you can usually wine the older ones), it is fooking free!

Fill 'em up with gas.....drive 'em all week. The automatics, I don't know about.......of course, who would want a small Toyota pickup with an automatic? My Tundra is an automatic (six spd) but I often use it for towing a trailer and there an automatic is well worth it.

Sort of kind of like when I bought my Weedeater lawn mower a few months ago at the Dangerous Walmart store.First thing I did to it when I brought it home was to remove that damn safety handle and that coil spring and that cable.Where the coil spring was, I tied a piece of wire so the engine would run.I tote a screwdriver with me when I mow my yard to shut off the engine by grounding the spark plug to the engine block when I want to stop the engine.fed govt Screws Up Everything!

Or the new gas cans, you either have to drill or bust the plastic valves out of the spout, or cut it off and force a piece of hose over the remaining tubing to get it to work ...

Sometimes the government mandates such switches, sometimes the manufacturers make the changes either to avoid lawsuits or to appear safer to prospective customers.

Sometimes "the government" isn't ours, but it's easier to change for everybody than it is to have different models for different countries.

Really? You think you can reload the cylinder of that revolver faster than you can fire the other barrel of that derringer?

I suspect the .410 would be suitably accurate for any reasonable self defense range.

So unless you think you will have time to group your shots, The higher accuracy is pretty much moot.

Depends on what you're after.

On a shot per shot basis, the .410 is going to deliver more to target.

effectively ten 30 caliber pellets to target in the time it takes to pull the trigger twice.

Whereas the Ruger is going to take 5 trigger pulls, a reload, and than another 5 trigger pulls.

That's not to say that one is a better gun than the other, but as in so much it depends on what you're looking for it to do.

Also the .410 loading is generally reported to have a fairly high 1 shot stop percentage, since you are usually effectively hitting the target multiple times in 1 shot.

Based on reports and testing, the rounds that produce the best one shot stops are those that produce a nice hydrostatic shock wave in the blood pressure that effectively shuts down the brain for a period of time. Now that's not to say they are going to stay down, only that they are going to drop on the first shot and stay down for a bit. Shotguns do this quite effectively since they tend to dump a large part of their energy to a broad section of the body inducing such a hydrostatic shock. This, of course, depends upon a reasonably direct impact to center mass.

So it all depends on your preferences, choices, and so on.

My biggest objection would be the weight of the piece which IMO makes it less of a carry piece. On the other hand it's flat which again IMO makes it easier to conceal than a revolver.

I can get 5 shots on target. And reload in about 2 seconds.

A derringer is an inaccurate piece of junk. Ruger makes an infinately better gun.

.357 or 38 P+ hollowpoints at close range you only need one or two anyway. The other 3 are extra. The SP101 is truly a remarkably accurate gun for a snubby. I can shoot the same size groups with that as I can with any handguns.

He thinks he will be in a movie or a shooting range when all this takes place ... you kill them with the first shot, you might have time enough for the second shot, then you better be ducking for cover and grabbing your backup and looking around for his partner(s.)

There is much to be prepared for, both before, during and AFTER the situation ... fact is, the further they are from you, the more difficult it may be to convince a jury that deadly force was valid ... the closer they are to you, the more chance it will be your attacker who is talking to the court, prosecutor and jury ... for your murder ... be prepared and keep a cool head ... then, the mistakes you make might be minor enough to handle easily ...

Would be an OK survival gun for your BOB. Would be somewhat useful for taking small game but only at very close ranges as shot would spread really fast.

Unless you are facing a completely green and incompetent attacker ... the matter will be decided in those first two shots ... in the movies, there are gun fights, teenie bobber gangsters like a lot of shooting ... a real attacker knows what he wants, is professional and is going to have it QUICKLY! ... most idiots are going to allow him into the "zone of no recovery" before they even begin to react ... from there, five bullets or a thousand and five will make damn little difference ... it will be him pumping them into your dead corpse ...

Used to carry a BIG one, really didn't hide well ... now this is my choice:

http://www.rohrbaughfirearms.com/

Even a 9mm can go though a wall and do more damage than you want to accept responsibility for ... if you are good with a firearm, a .32 Beretta, like the wife carries, is plenty. If they are any farther from you than what those weapons can cover, your first choice should be in running ... loss of ego is much better than the time and hassle of explaining a fatal shooting to sufficiency ... there are just too many people willing to have you take far greater risks with your life than you are willing to give them ...

Evidently Bond Arms was advertising on the Michael Savage {Savage Nation} Radio Show
http://www.michaelsavage.wnd.com/

Usually for a Women the 1st Shot is the Only Shot.

So a .410 Derringer with a Load of # 4 Buck Shot would be more than enough to put any Attacker in a Room 'down' with ~10 Pellets {~25 Cal} with a 2"~3" wide shot pattern and 6"~12" of penetration.

Note : "00" Buck Shot is not recommend for up close 'In-the-Room' Self-Defense.

I never understood the whole "weight" thing. A half pound or so more than a lightweight gun never bothered my at all. I carried a S&W 28 6+ 1/2" at work for 40 hours a week and they don't come a lot heavier than that. Give me steel always. No plast...er polymer, for me.

Now you have me worried ... what "things" other than a woman could possibly be a "desirable sexual object?"

You can always tell people with no experience in the use of gun(s), they simply want scary looking ones ... no one should ever see the gun except you, the officer who relieves you of it, and the court ... and then you, again, when it is returned to you -- ready for its' next use. (well, the dead assailant/attacker might catch a brief glimpse, but who the hell is going to tell?)

But, if the look of guns scare you, and you like that sort of thing, hey, GET KINKY ON IT!!! <grin>

Well, do ya, punk?

Obviously the problem here is you bunch of penis envy guys are letting a bunch of Hollywood liberals create your reality for you. And they were all born without brains. (Say, doesn't that bad guy in the ad attacking the blond in the car sort of look like the Governator?)

No, you DO NOT want a derringer. What, you are all a bunch of high rolling gamblers? No, you DO NOT want a derringer that shoots .410 shotgun shells. A derringer is a gut gun. It can't be aimed at all. even .410 kicks like a mule and you probably will have trouble hanging on to the piece. Plus it's so small it essentially has NO barrel and if that weren't bad enough, it's a LOT fatter than you think giving you the "turtle in the pants" look if you have it in a pocket.

You clowns have been watching the Death Wish marathon too much. Only an idiot would try to carry a .44 magnum like Dirty Harry. Given the flame that shoots out plus the recoil you'd have a much better chance of burning the bad guy alive than shooting him! Not to mention you'd be deaf for a couple days if you shot it inside!

Turn off the TV and leave the theater and just go get a nice little .380 double action pocket rocket. And then PRACTICE with it so that when your life is on the line you actually can HIT something with it besides the floor and ceiling! A nice stainless steel .38 revolver can work too. No .357 or +P bullshit. You want to be EFFECTIVE (means stay alive) not prove who has the biggest John Thomas. And Oh yeah, go take an NRA safety course as soon as you get it before you hurt yourself or someone else.

Yeah, perverted drill sergeants, especially, like to make fun of "noobs in the army" who don't know the army wants you to refer to your gun as "your weapon" and your penis as "your gun."

It's like DUH!

You don't want to aim, you might not even have time to aim, you want to point and shoot and have some of those buckshot to hit its' target ... once you get the upper edge, have your safe spot to defend, you can pull out the backup and take time ... that derringer is one serious piece of shootin' power ... just shoot yourself in the little finger, or little toe to check it out ... but I would use the barrel with the .357/.38 ... the buckshot might take off your whole hand!

Probably good to point out that professionals, govt. terminators, pay for kill, etc. use a .22 - .24 cal.

But then, the worst kill I ever seen was with a chain ... I remember

- A derringer is a gut gun.

That's right 'in-a-room' at 2~3 Yards/Metres : It's all about a 'gut' {body} shot and bring them 'down' with one shot. Take the Gun in both hands; get down on one-knee; point the barrel at their 'guts';
and pull the trigger.

and keep pulling the trigger to stay alive ~ RHF

I just don't see why any black that thought about it would be in support of obama.

I mean I don't see any news about a major increase in food stamp subsidies, free medical for minorities, increases in section 8, housing vouchers, etc. to support/supplement their businesseses in the fields of unlicensed pharmacists, makin' bacon, five fingered discount outlets, etc!

Civil war in the US would be really terrible. (And I have doubt, that such handguns would be the weapons of choice.)

Better would be to prevent havoc.

I think, that violence isn't the right way. People would better try to reacquire control about all elements of the society: the communities, politics, education, health-care, nutrition, transportation, military and even entertainment.

In all these fields, there are people involved, that do not want their country destroyed. But there are also 'bad guys', that like misery, violence, sickness and dirt.

If you want nicer people, you had to clean your (personal!) environment, remove the rubble, overpaint the graffiti, disallow drug trafficking, rethink education, watch less tv, cook your own food, walk, smile - but don't carry a gun around.

To regain control you need to start with local affairs and reorganise, what is in reach. Do not let any dubious character have any influence on any public office. To identify such persons is difficult, but some characteristics you certainly don't want to have at - say - a teacher.
For example membership in any sort of 'secret society' is definitely not acceptable or massive tattoos, drug consume, sexual disorder, known violence or extremistic political opinions.

Such persons are generally a threat to more 'usual' people, because they are too boring for their sick brains.

I imagine a stick Tundra would be also but I have not seen one.

Than an SP-101? Only if you need to spray. If you can hit what you shoot at (and an SP-101 will do that very well at self defense distances) that gun is fine.

A .410 handgun round contains 8 or 9 pellets if it is a #4 shot. It contains 3 pellets if it is 000 which is approximately .36 caliber. A 12ga shoots about 9 pellets in 00.

Nope. Go back and revisit the .410 load fired by a Judge.

Three, if all impact and you are shooting 000 buck. You need to fire both barrels in a Bond 2 shot to equal the number of rounds in an SP-101.

This is true.

True with the Bond derringer, not so with a Taurus Judge or the S&W.

The resort to violence however is sometimes thrust upon people. The evil, the criminal and the aggressor has their own aganda. No amount of conciliation can deter them, only answering kind with kind.

You are refered to the 1930s for an example of wooly headed peace with honor stupidity and where it led. Had Europe stood up to Hitler any time between 1936 and 1938 the conflagaration of 1939 to 1945 could have been avoided.

Sometimes a small amount of preemptive violence is preferable to large amounts of avoidable violence.

Yes, at some point, when "the rich" have stolen and own everything, and a new person shows up and is told, "Sorry, no homes left, no food left, no jobs, sorry -- you can't pay for medical care -- so you are going to have to go off and die, and no opportunity for you to have a life or family", that person is going to know that "all his stuff" has been stolen, you know, the "God given stuff" -- such as the resources of the planet gifted him by God, and of course his God given rights ...

I would say, at that time, just like Sampson (well, or John the Baptist), he is going to have to grab up the jawbone of an ass and kill as many rich as necessary and anyway necessary.

... just sayin' ... but, sure looks to me like some of those people are "happening" today!

JS

Well, this is over simplified.

There are those times when the attacker is red faced, acting like a lunatic, cussing/shouting/threatening his weapon carried exposed for all to see ... but then there are those times when the attacker is either a real nut case, or is feigning "friendly" -- grinning -- speaking nicely, holding his weapon in a concealed manner -- making his approach slowly, and, every possible variation in between those extremes ...

I'd much rather have the first, easy to defend your actions from and the intent and NECESSITY of your actions, you are taking, are very clear to any witnesses.

The second is the stuff that law and order movies are made from and which make lawyers and attorneys rich -- and end up locking away innocent men.

A backup length of chain constructed out of 5/16 - 3/8 stock in your pocket, or other physical weapon gives one a lot of leeway and options for those "sticky times", those times when you want to begin your defense in a "gentle" manner, and carrying a baseball bat with you is just too clumsy.

Like you stated and demonstrated with knowledge of self defense, it is good to have all these things thought over, to know the limits, and when those limits are being overstepped, to even have had some good instructions/training along the way, BEFORE YOU NEED IT ...

But, this is for everyone to decide for themselves ... too often you don't get warning and you just have to "wing it", if you have not thought it out well -- this is when you can make mistakes which end up with you dead, or serving a prison sentence because of some ignorant and pansy jury.

I do know this, tomorrows paper is likely to carry news of the death of someone who could have benefited from having a weapon, having training, having been prepared, having had options ... and the city is full of those who will laugh at me even pointing this out.

Ask any cop on the street, who will level with you, you are responsible for your own protection and safety ... he/she is just their to find your attacker/murderer ... if that is good enough for you, don't even sweat taking responsibility for yourself, your wife, your children, etc. -- just let the cops find 'em ... that'll fix the dirty perps!

JS

Get, the .410 can do the same thing in about 50ms, and do it again 50ms later.

How accurate do you need to be at a typical distance of under 15 feet?

At close rates the typical .410 takes only one.

Then they really aren't relevant.

Which means exactly nothing at close quarters combat since extreme accuracy isn't a significant factor since you don't take the time to aim properly anyway.

Sure....do you suppose your attacker is going to wait until you get in position, fix your stance, and line up your sights?

Actually, not so much. Typical grouping is under 4" inside of 21 feet.

So if you are reasonably on target, you're going to be putting five .30 caliber rounds into them with the first trigger pull. (assuming triple aught and a 3" .410 shell)

That's usually a show stopper as far as the criminal goes.

All depends on the manner of carry. Weight can be a factor.

If you mean the "rule of three" yes, but then most averages are, aren't they.

Yep. Most would be in between those scenarios....like a robbery going bad or a carjacking.

Not as much if the "reasonable person" syndrome is in play and whether the state holds self defense to be an 'active' or 'passive' defense in court.

Yes, but a length of chain is only good in certain scenarios and is a lousy tradoff against a .357.

If you decide to carry a firearm, you need to already have a very good idea of how dear you hold life other than your own. If you would hesitate to pull the trigger when necessary or would require a lot of study of your navel on a case by case basis.....don't carry a gun.

Many peoole simply don't even consider it....at least not a serious consideration....

Too many people think that the police are there to protect them. Not just as members of society but individually. They aren't.

I can remember my first duck hunt, my father brought along my grandfathers ancient double barreled 10ga. In my enthusiasm, I pulled back both triggers ... totally busted up my pride, taught me to seat such a weapon FIRMLY into my shoulder, and forced an immediate 180 on me (gramps didn't believe in much of a rubber butt plate either!) ... barely left me standing ... hey, I just claim it was being young and thin ... well, and stupid, you can't over look stupid ... I had been warned ...

That's about right, the problem is you lose space because the pellets are staggered. Thus a lot of the shell capacity is empty air.

> It > contains 3 pellets if it is 000 which is approximately .36 caliber.

Maybe a few brands, but if you look around even in 2.5" you can get 4 pellets.

http://www.midwayusa.com/viewProduct/default.aspx?productNumber=533166 and in 3" (which I believe I mentioned somewhere) you get 5 pellets.

http://www.midwayusa.com/viewProduct/?productNumber=170759 and .36 matches up nicely with the .357 caliber of the .38 and .357.

> 12ga shoots about 9 pellets in 00.

Again, with the 12, you lose capacity because the pellets are staggered.

In the .410 they are neatly lined up, making maximum use of the available space.

Use a buffered shot and you will get a nice tight group at close ranges.

> Nope. Go back and revisit the .410 load fired by a Judge.

Are you talking the regular Judge or the 3" Judge?

One gives you 4 pellets of triple aught, the other gives you 5.

The Bondarm's Century 2000 derringer, the gun under discussion, accepts up to a 3" .410 shell.

Hence the 5 pellets discussed.

Of course, you could also load in a .410 with 5 pellets of 0000 buck (0.375). Of course, you're probably going to need to mail order those, and I think only a few manufacturers even make them.

Actually even if more than 1 hit, you will still be hitting the target multiple times. :-)

However, if that's the case, odds are you didn't hit much of consequence unless you're talking the head.

> You need to fire
> both barrels in a Bond 2 shot to equal the number of rounds in an SP-101.

Uh, an SP-101 in .38/.357 only holds 5 rounds. That's equal to the number of pellets of triple or quad aught buck in a 3" shell.

So you would have to fire until empty, reload, and then empty again, your SP101 to get an equal number of lead pieces headed downrange to match those produced by 2 pulls of the Bond's trigger.

Well, I wasn't intending this to be an in-depth review of all the variations, only contesting Dudu's immediate and apparently arbitrary dismissal of the Century 2000 as being unsuitable for self defense, and challenging each of his talking points to establish that.

About the only point that was really valid was the accuracy issue, but at self defense ranges a gun doesn't need to be particularly accurate hence my noting it as pretty much a moot point.

The armament of the American society is most likely the greatest stumbling block for globalistic self-proclaimed fascistic elite.

But these arms are not to be used, because in a real fight, the professionals are better off than you with a handgun.

But people could 'take it back'. I mean 'the real life', the communities, local affairs, education and so forth. It is all about people and how they behave. People should know, that certain things are not allowed and should not be done.

Drugs of all sorts feed the 'bad guys', so you should try to avoid any drugs - at least not pay for them. This because the money for the drugs goes into the wrong canals and supports the criminals and unwanted behaviour.

Any person without a shelter is a thread to public health. So it is mandatory to allow every person access to soap and water, some sort of housing and food.

Any kind of toxic waste should be removed from public places, to allow kids safe play in their neighbourhood.

Public land should be accessible. Even farmland should be allowed to enter for pedestrians, that just want to pass.

To create a strong society based on civil affairs, the industry and the smaller companies had to be protected.

The Americans fought endless wars without apparent reason and without apparent benefit. Many think, these wars are somehow good for America. But - for example- what kind of benefit do you expect from the invasion of Afghanistan, Somalia, Irak? It always ends like Vietnam: with a lot of dead soldiers and no real gain.

- The average self defense scenario follows

- three seconds.

The Rule of One* :
One Shot,
One Yard,
One Second.

With a .410 Cal Derringer for Self-Defense :

Last Shot [Kill'Em] @ 1-Yard

That assumes many things which aren't necessarily true.

While that is true, you also get increased velocity and much better projectile design. I have some 158gr unjacketed Hollow Points +P, Winchester, I think, that are supposed to be effective out of a short barrel. Sort of an event in the airweight, very controlable in the 2.5" M19.

Honestly, after several years of looking at derringers and some of the absurd calibers they come in, I find it hard to fault the choice of any lightweight J frame. The more serious calibers are often as wide and nearly as long and always weigh more. Mine hides very well and while reloading isn't really an issue at close range (IMO) reloading a derringer can be a PITA. I bought some Speed Strips and I can carry the J-Frame and 2 Speed strips very comfortably. I really only would carry it if the 908 or G-19 was impractical for some reason, though.

I don't know, personal experience has taught me that there are quick fixes.

The biggest bully in the world, if I can get access to him, when he is away from his gang, and I with the proper tool(s), can be fixed in damn short order ... cut off the head, the snake dies, it may wither a bit, but it dies ...

A gun is a fabulous tool, however, experience, cunning, stealth, intelligence, purpose, motivation, etc., these are all equally important ... a single man with the "righteousness of God" in his heart and soul can be an amazing thing to witness -- a group of such men brought the whole british empire to its' knees and established America ... masters, in fear of their slaves, will always down play the importance of even a single man, let alone the awesome powers which exist in a group of such men, men who were not born to be slaves simply ignore their whining ... most men know what they are, they have already looked into the core of their being and know what exists there ... a coward, or not ...

If you are throwing sticks of dynamite (or hand grenades), it is somewhat like horseshoes -- not a whole lot of preparation is necessary, just don't be so drunk you kill yourself ...

I'd say a police wad cutter would be effective at the distances discussed here ... and cheap! Heck, reused brass and a shot out barrel might even work to your advantage, in some situations -- crudely cast slug, etc.

For years, the wife and I have, on occasion, and usually a few times a year, take walks, pick wild asparagus, various salad greens and mushrooms, wild onions, etc. which you just can't purchase at "the government grocery stores." My grandmother taught me as a child, what her mother had taught her, probably her mother before her ... etc.

In the past we have been eaten up by mosquitoes on these jaunts, and learned to carry mosquito repellent, religiously.

It is plain spooky, but in the last 3-4-5 years we have not gotten a single bite, never had to use repellent, etc. We have talked about the high strangeness of this ... and only infrequently have we seen the big mosquito trucks spraying. But, we have also noticed we hardly ever see bees on the stands of hollyhocks the wife grows, or the other bee/bird attracting plants in out yard(s.) And, the wife constantly complains about the lack of hummingbirds at her feeders, in the summer ...

I am guilty of attempting to put together some sort of relationship to all these observations ... just like sd with the flares ...

Like I said above, his comment makes a number of assumptions that aren't necessarily true. One of which you just illustrated.

More examples of what I was talking about.

Yep, but a soft lead pellet typically does a pretty good job particularly when you're hitting them with multiple examples at the same time.

Different strokes for different folks. Doesn't mean a derringer in .410 is the automatically bad choice Dudu tried to assert.

You have your preferences, I have mine, Dudu has his, and John has his.

But a .410 is a proven performer.

That last one..
"..but don't carry a gun around.."
is where you demonstrate you're not clued in.
The so-called "Wild West" was a much safer place to be than cities on the East Coast during the same period, and that includes the wild and wooly gold and silver mining towns in Nevada and California.
And the difference is a simple one.
On the East Coast, the people were disarmed and defenseless
In the "Wild West" people were armed, willing and able to defend themselves.

What "professionals are those ?
And what makes you presume that we (allegedly) NON "professionals
- only have handguns ?
- are less capable that those alleged "professionals"
Not to mention that there is no guarantee that all those "professionals would align themselves with an abusive government.

Feel free to list those wars that Americans fought "without apparent reason and without apparent benefit."

Who is "Many"
and HOW many are those "many" ???
Just so we can figure out what we're dealing with here ?

Afghanistan was to attack and destabilize the Taliban
At the time, becoming a major force force in creating radical Islamofascists.
Somalia was at the time supposed to be an aid mission that was badly planned and executed
Iraq was a multiple level play
a) limit and ultimately get rid of Saddam
b) Send a message to Iran and others that they are NOT invulnerable because they are far from the US
c) an opportunity to destroy a whole bunch of jihadists
d) curb local mullahs
e) Come to the aid of the Kurds and southern Iraqis who were being massacred wholesale by Saddam.
Just to name a few...

Maybe you need to study up a bit before you come back to spout more of your simplistic cant.

Anyone who does NOT practice "point-shoot" techniques for self-defense is doing the wrong thing
Self-defense shooting has to be instinctive point shooting.
You will not have time to get into the right position, bring your weapon to eye-level and aim carefully..
You must literally point your weapon and pull the trigger.
That means practicing regularly UNAIMED shooting at distances under 10 yards

'The art of war'
old Chinese philosophy of government.

But anyhow: there is a difference between a person and a country.

I have trouble to understand the idea, that people think, they have to defend themselves against the own government.

I mean, not only with words, but with real guns. Ain't these professionals the own soldiers? How could soldiers even consider to fight against their own people?

They get brainwashed, for sure. But even zombies on drugs would remember, were they came from. Or is that about money? Well, 'rip off the pharao' was the favourite game of the Egyptian 'priests'.

Or are there religious motives?

Well, I understand what you mean, but this is not, what I wanted to say.
(If you intend to fight a real fight against armoured vehicles, than you need a little more 'punch' than a handgun.)
I do not understand the idea itself. How could people consider this could be necessary?

I'm German, but I'm really interested in this question, because it seems not very plausible to me, that people feel, they need to defend themselves against the own government.

Undoubtedly, I have merely stated my preference.

Dogmatism amongst gun owners is amusing and frequently annoying. Especially when paired with innaccurate information. 8)

One of Murphy's Laws for Grunts states:

"Professionals are predictable. But the world is full of amatures".

Meaning, I suppose, that you can predict what a professional will do based on his training. But the amatures are unpredictable, which gives them a certain advantage.

Another illiterate moron sticks his head up and announces himself.

Adopted by Congress on July 4, 1776
The Unanimous Declaration of the Thirteen United States of America

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bonds which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of government becomes destructive to these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. --Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large for their exercise; the state remaining in the meantime exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies without the consent of our legislature.

He has affected to render the military independent of and superior to civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us:

For protecting them, by mock trial, from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states:

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world:

For imposing taxes on us without our consent:

For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury:

For transporting us beyond seas to be tried for pretended offenses:

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule in these colonies:

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments:

For suspending our own legislatures and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here, by declaring us out of his protection and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burned our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow citizens taken captive on the high seas to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare, is undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms: our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in attention to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which, would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war, in peace friends.

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress, assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name, and by the authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare, that these united colonies are, and of right ought to be free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as free and independent states, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent states may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor.

Are you insane? You are German and you can't imagine why someone might not care for thier government? Did they teach you about Uncle Adolph in school, boy.

Governments are supposed to govern with the consent of the governed. When the government becomes harmful to the governed it must go. How messy that will be depends on how much the government resists. Normally and election or an indictment solve the problem. Other times it does not.

Also, your forebears would be very dissapointed in you using a pistol against an armored vehicle. In fact many times less than bright people have made the argument that it's not realistic to fight an armored vehicle with a pistol. Well, no shit. Who do you think is stupid enough to deploy a platoon of pistol armed militia against a platoon of tanks?

Tanks require fuel, water, ammo and spare parts. They require people to operate them and they require food, water, clothing and various amenities to survive. If you can interdict them before it gets to the tank, why you remove all the advantages of the thick armored shell.

And while I get that you won't understand this, in our country the givernment will find that the troops will not neccessarily make war on the civilians. Their oath is to the Constitution and ultimately to the People, not to some transient tramp in the White House.

Excellent response, but it ignores more recent misbehavior and abuse by governments

Just look at all the murder and mayhem committed by governments on their own people in the last 100 years

But to change the subject and the subject line....
I am looking for a good and readable intro to US Civics for a friend who is going to become a US citizen.
He wants more than just to pass the test - which he's already fully qualified to do
He wants more in depth analysis and commentary
In a way, I wish that Isaac Asimov had written a book on this comparable to his Guide to the Bible.. it would have been a hell of a read...

You Germans are supposed to be excellent engineers, no one there can make a flame thrower big enough to incinerate vehicles? IUD's to take them off the road? Devices to roast pigs in a Kevlar vest?

I agree, those fancy tanks and SWAT vehicles would need to be taken out quickly and put 'em on their feet. A section of drilling pipe, with a simple explosive charge and big cast lead slug should make it though those bullet proof windows, etc. Some cleverly twisted pieces of tool steel metal tossed out in front of the tank tracks should be able to wind up in them and slow/stop them. My gawd man, the American forefathers, the "terrorists" in iraq and iran, afghanistan, etc. can come up some great ideas, are fine German engineers to be outdone? It will be the helicopters which will take a bit of thought and experimenting ...

But, peaceful revolution first, then anyway possible ... and don't forget waiting, getting the leaders into vulnerable positions, isolated from the main group, stealth, cunning, poisons, etc.

Remember the earth pits of vietnam with sharpened bamboo spikes which had been urinated on -- scared the bejesus up and was an excellent psychological weapon, and effective too ... snares to snap a mans neck ... where there is a will, there is ALWAYS a way ... it is VERY DIFFICULT to take any nation where the citizens have a will and weapons. They must break the peoples will or it is a no-go. The real danger is in government programs to mentally enslave the populations, get them used to be unquestioning slaves, brainwashed, feminized males, etc.

In America, government and our government employees are servants of the people, whenever they forget this, it is the responsibility, placed on us by our Constitution and the forefathers and those who died to give us our rights to correct this criminal government -- and to use whatever means are necessary ... it may be different for you.

Again the silly argument that you citizens in the US would be facing soldiers with handguns..
I'll remind you that the Barrett .50 BMG was designed for CIVILIAN use and then adopted by the military and other government agencies.

Then you need to study up on the history of government abuse and murder (democide) of their own people.
Just in the 20th Century, such governments have killed of more than 140,000,000 people
Just read up on Germany in the 20th Century as a prime candidate of such abuse
It would take a blind person to not understand that people need to defend themselves from their own abusive governments.

Why don't you analyse why the people in Hungary revolted against their "masters" in 1956 ?
Why don't you read up on the people who risked their lives to escape from East Germany ?

Your lack of understanding is based on abyssal ignorance of the abuses that governments perpetrate against their own people..

Both seem to contain the same number of pellets in 000. The difference is in the powder charge, apparently.

Not per wiki.

Perhaps of 00.......but the heavy load mentioned was 000.

Same with two trigger pulls on an SP-101.

Both at close range would be effective to center mass....the edge going to the .410.

Again, not per wiki on the .410 shotshell. Anyway, I have three SP-101s (as you can tell, I hate them), two in .357 and one in .327Federal. The latter holds six rounds.

Not going to argue with you. You can see what wiki says as well as I can.

Dudu tends to run off half cocked over anything you say or suggest so I don't pay much attention to him on those points. What got me going was mention of the SP-101. It is one of the things he and I agree on. It is an excellent gun.

Fair enough.

Particularly in a poor holster. A good holster tends to negate that factor.

Perhaps on that particular one. Many derringers are quite light hence more vicious recoil.

I followed the same pattern as you, with one additional step
I moved to the Colt Agent and Cobra snubbies.
They offer one more round than the S&W J-frames for the same weight.
I also find their triggers much better (very personal taste)

In America, the citizens are the government, of course we would not fight against a majority consensus of our citizens, the government ...

You have this confused with the relatively small group of criminal public servants, from the president on down, who are attempting to usurp the peoples powers and become "our leaders", this is simply out of the question. They are now engaged in wholesale criminal behaviors and actions without respect for the Constitution, it takes time to put down such widespread and powerful criminals.

If you owned a company, would you let the employees become criminal and take over the company? The answer is NO! Indeed, it is "HELL NO!"

They, the criminals in government, simply need the prison cells which they are entitled to and replace them with proper public servants ... however, they may not be willing to go peacefully ...

Well, I may not care for daves whacko politics as he tokes on his bong, but I see no problem in his owning/possessing/using a firearm for protection ... indeed, everyone who has never committed a crime using a firearm should be required to own one and keep it in good working order, and have completed a course in high school on its' proper operation and safe carry and use ...

Years ago, back in the 90's, I used to have a small laser device, was the size of a .38 but a bit longer, would chamber up and a slight pull on the trigger would let the pin-switch, which was located where a primer normally is, make contact and turn on the pin point laser, I would sit in the back yard with a beer and play with it often, especially in the evenings, after work ... it sharpened my performance on the range and in making a can bounce over the ground like no one could believe ... I forgot who I gave it too. It came with a snap on cap which would hold the device off when removed from the gun.

Anyone know where you can get those, I'd like a couple in different calibers?

Really!

The difference is cooperation and organisation. A single person cannot know, what other people do, only guess. The uncertainty makes it much harder for an individual to defend himself than a multitude of organised individuals.

This means, that individuals should find trustful friends.

In modern times people are too often separated and have not many trusted relations.

To overcome this, I kind of 'invented' a concept, I call 'tribes':
imagine 'Indians', but young, modern, western people, equipped with computers and other electronic means, that mimic Indians to some extend (wear a feather or alike).

Actually I live in Germany and am an engineer. American society is something I have not too much knowledge, but certain developments really frighten me. There are these FEMA camps for example or military grade weapons in private hands or in that of policemen. A lot of other things I really don't like, but usually the people and have quite a few friends from the US.

I need to find the internal ram board for an Icom 745/751. I broke mine by pushing too hard when reinstalling.

Money is tight, as we all know. Do you have one that I can buy?

I sure would appreciate it.

Thank you.

Okay, first of all the FEMA camps are the product of diseased imaginations. 2nd if it were true why wouldn't we want to arm ourselves to prevent us being cast into concentration camps.

As to military grade hardware in the hands of civilians? Tough shit. We as a people are grown up enough to decide our own fate, needs and wants. If I want to own something it's my business so long as I do no harm to another.

Now the police having them, I don't much care for that. But your cops have military grade weapons don't they. Ever hear of GSG-9.

What is military grade anyway?

Depends on how you fight them.

Apparently you seem to feel the only way to fight against armored vehicles are on their terms.

Lessons from history.

I take it then your knowledge of your own country's history starts around

V-cong. Plant a number of thin pools around potential LZs wire grenades to the poles and run lines between the poles. When the down draft starts wiping the poles around, it pulls the pin, bang, one damaged or downed helo.

I think something like the bird traps which use projectiles to fire a net over an area, but do the same thing with light wire hooked into heavier gauge stuff. Once the rotor pulls in enough around the rotor head....well that's the end of that helo.

Check the links given. You can get 5 pellets in a 3" shell, and 4 in a 2.5" shell.

Midway sells them.

Maybe wiki is wrong?

There, corrected it for you. 2.5" shell holds 4, not 3 per http://www.midwayusa.com/viewProduct/default.aspx?productNumber=533166

Yep, and as cited above in a 3" shell even according to wiki it's 5 pellets of 000

Yea, but 2 trigger pulls take longer than 1.

Simply my point, the .410 derringer isn't automatically unsuitable as Dudu asserted.

True, but Dudu cited the .38/.357

Again, my comments weren't intended to address all the possible combinations, only to challenge Dudu's immediate dismissal of the derringer and the assertion that the SP101 would be drastically better for self defense.

Yep, and in this case it was wrong. Which is why I provided the cites above for you.

It is, and I'm not challenging that. I'm simply challenging his dismissal of the derringer as something far worse.

Should be required reading by most USAmericans.

I've not personally read the book, but perhaps I'll find a copy.

I do know that most in the US need a civics and history refresher course, since most really have no idea of either, aside from what they read on the internet, which is dubious at best, and outright untrue at worst.

Yep, however, it's really only vicious at the range, when you need it, you don't really notice the recoil nearly as much......only later when your hand

Try again, bubby
If I want to know what other people do, I have two ways of gathering that data
1) Observation
2) Asking questions

Also what makes you presume that people people in the US are NOT "organized"
Just from the people I shoot with, I have access to a whole slew of

"organizations", national, state and local.

You are making stupid projections on others Just because it happens to be true for you, does NOT automatically make it true for others.

LOL
You have been swallowing stupid propaganda
There are NO "FEMA camps".
And what is a "military grade weapon" ?

And just as a note, since 1934, when the US government started controlling automatic weapons, which by the way one can still own in the US, there has been ONLY ONE crime committed with a legally registered machine gun. And that was by a policeman who killed another cop for cheating on his wife.
Guns in the hands of the law-abiding have NEVER been a problem, except for governments that do not trust the people they are supposed to serve Read up Adolph Hitler, if you need a fairly recent (German) example of that.

As to your last sentence, you might need to re-write it to make it comprehensible.

Yes, one can only wonder how a German manages to take history and miss the whole part about Hitler and what he did to various classes of German citizens (as well as citizens of other countries).

Maybe he was asleep that day.

Germans don't get to lecture anybody about people fearing government for at least 500 years.

de Tocqueville wrote his opus magnus almost 30 years before the Civil War; it is not a civics book but a commentary/critique of the American mind and culture at that time. It might be classed as sociology or anthropology, but not contemporary political science.

Your friend needs a good book on the structure and mechanics of the American version of a republic within a democracy, as a late 19th century creed called it. I don't have one to offer; de Tocqueville would be an interesting read but it doesn't deal with topics like the effects of the Civil War, the additional amendments to the Constitution, the wars since 1835, the relationships among industrialization, massive immigration, the end of slavery and the subsequent civil rights legislation.

Naa, my neighbor could do just too much damage, too quickly, with a nuke or even SAM missile ... I'd say, depends on the equipment, tanks and cannon, fully auto weapons, etc. ... no problem.

No, the mindset of the police is very bad and it is impossible to keep the bad apples out, before some are able to do some very bad things.
Just like child molesters will always attempt to gravitate to being around children, and employment which allows such access ... the same is true with positions of authority. Control freaks will always seek these positions, people who like to abuse authority, like to punish and discipline, these people will seek these positions ...

A strong citizens committee watch dogging any authority arm, group, branch of our government will always be a necessity ... if you town or city doesn't already have one, they need one(s.)

The price of freedom and rights is constant vigilance ... but, fortunately, it can be done in a manner which is both interesting and enjoyable ...

Yes, the people are the real government here in America ... no one wants their government to be unarmed ... besides, I think the Constitution is very clear on those rights, to bear arms.

The framers would have known it would take equal arms to put down an offending group of criminal public servants, if they ever attempted, or did, usurp the peoples powers.

Not nine as originally stated. That was the reason I mentioned 12ga.

Yes, but not as long as one trigger pull, a search for the damn gun...and another trigger pull.....if one is up to it. Those derringers have a very nasty recoil and not much to hang on to.

See above statement on Dudu's veracity....

Fair enough.......I have, as mentioned, three of the SP-101s and none of the derringers.....although a friend of mine has about 10 of them. He isn't thrilled about shooting them either. ;)

I've never said nine.....but let me check.....nope, closest I got was stating you would fire 10 pellets with TWO pulls of the trigger.

"On a shot per shot basis, the .410 is going to deliver more to target.
effectively ten 30 caliber pellets to target in the time it takes to pull
the trigger twice."

I think a slight misreading on your end.

It happens.

Glad we could clear that up.

Hmmm... While the recoil is punishing, I've never dropped one when firing it yet. Not even the first time.

Not really, just tend to slap him about when he makes foolish ones. Maybe he

- Yes, but not as long as one trigger pull,
- a search for the damn gun...

That's the One-Shot {inside-a-room} scenario.

IF that One-Shot missed or did not stop him

- Those derringers have a very nasty recoil
- and not much to hang on to.

Somalia was one of the poorest countries of the world in that time. The Americans managed to make things even worse, since now there are pirates from that country, that threaten the ships coming from the Suez Canal.
It is hard to believe how these people could be a thread to the US military, since there wasn't even a government, hence no real army - only tribal forces with not much more than a self-made mortar.

Why did the US forces failed to create at least a little bit stability?

Actually the Kurds had more problems with the Turks, which is a country the Americans support.

Small Shootin Irons, including Derringers can be very deadly, just ask Yancy Derringer (Jock Mahoney). He toted his Derringer in his hat.

I shot an SP-101. Once. There is no reason to subject yourself to that as there are equally effective gun/cartridge combos that are far less painful.

Propagation Forecast Bulletin 39 ARLP039
From Tad Cook, K7RA
Seattle, WA September 30, 2011
To all radio amateurs

SB PROP ARL ARLP039
ARLP039 Propagation de K7RA

Our Sun was very active over the past week, with average solar flux rising nearly 12 points to 155.5. Average daily sunspot numbers however dropped nearly 41 points to 96.1. This implies fewer but more intense sunspots.

A huge sunspot group numbered 1302 emerged on September 22, and this was the source of a coronal mass ejection which triggered an immense geomagnetic storm. The planetary A index peaked at 67 on September 26, followed by 30 the next day and 24 on September 28. The planetary K index reached 8 for two of the three-hour reporting periods on September 26, indicating an intense geomagnetic storm, and with aurora observed in many places, including Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, North Dakota and South Dakota.

On September 22 there was a major X1.4 class solar flare at 1100 UTC, with a large CME, but this was when sunspot 1302 was just coming over the horizon, so it wasn't Earth directed.

On September 24 sunspot group 1302 produced a larger X1.9 flare, and today the group is just past the point where it is directly facing Earth, but still in the middle of the visible solar disc. It could still produce more flares.

Sunspot group area is measured in millionths of a solar hemisphere, and for sunspot group 1302 the measure for September 22-28 was 480, 840, 1300, 980, 950, 980 and 1070. The combined area for all visible sunspot groups peaked at 1930 on September 24. This is the largest measure of sunspot area since January 15-16, 2005 in Cycle 23, when the numbers were 1980 and 1960. The time period between those big numbers is six years, 8 months and 9 days.

Other big numbers over the past decade for total sunspot area were 2420 on July 21, 2004, 5690 on October 30, 2003 (sunspot number was 293 that day), and 3940 and 3160 on March 29 and September 24, 2001. The sunspot number on both those days in 2001 was 315.

Another big number this week emerged on September 24 when the solar flux was 190.4. The number hasn't been this high since November 2, 2003 when it was also 190.4. The days prior to that beginning on October 25, 2003 had solar flux values of 221.5, 298.3, 257.2, 274.4, 291.7, 271.4, 248.9, and 210.4. This was probably the last big blast of solar activity for Cycle 23, as nothing since then comes anywhere near that level.

Currently the latest forecast - which is actually from Thursday, September 29 - from NOAA/USAF has solar flux at 140 for September 30 through October 3, then 135, 130, 135 and 140 on October 4-7, then 145 on October 8-10 and 140 on October 11-17.

Predicted planetary A index is 12 and 10 on September 30 through October 1, then 5 on October 2-7, then 8, 15, 12 and 8 on October 8-11, and 5 on October 12-21.

Geophysical Institute Prague expects unsettled conditions on September 30, quiet to unsettled October 1-3, and quiet October 4-6.

A note from Tom Jerardi, K3CXW corrects our reference to the Autumnal Equinox in the northern hemisphere, as it means equal day and night, which is independent of hemisphere.

Fred Honnold, KH7Y is in Ocean View, Hawaii, on the southwest part of the Big Island. Fred reported that on Thursday night, September 23 he worked three new countries on 6 meters, and that "Six is cooking." He has worked 56 countries on 6 meters since 2006. He worked "BV2DQ at 0324z, PP5XX at 0404z, DU7/PA0HIP at 0455z who most of the evening was 569, and LU5FF for an 11,000 KM QSO at 0512z, plus FK8CP (loud) two hours and three VK4s, FP and CX. It all ended at 0804z."

After Fred worked PP5XX (in grid square GG55QW, 12541 KM from Fred), PP5XX worked BV2DQ long path. BV2DQ was running 100 watts into a small antenna.

Julio, NP3CW in San Juan, Puerto Rico reports that on September 23, 10 and 12 meters were open for many hours to Europe. In four hours he worked 75 stations from Europe on 10 meters, and 4X4K in Azerbaijan. He had 60 contacts with Europe and some North America on 12 meters, and he worked 40 JA stations in one hour on 12 meter CW. On 6 meters he worked a number of stations across South America.

Don Keith, N4KC writes, "I've been licensed for 50 years this year...since I was 13...but somehow always managed to be inactive during sunspot maxima. I've really been anticipating this cycle, and not so patiently, I admit.

"However, tonight between 0015 and 0110 GMT (September 23 CDST) made the wait worthwhile. In about an hour, I worked 4W6A in East Timor, JT1RF in Mongolia, and JH7PKU in Japan, all with good signals on 12 meters. I only run 100 watts and use a hexbeam on 12. SFI was reported as 173. 12 is a totally new experience for me since it wasn't even a ham band when I was active before and has been spotty since 2005 when my interest was rekindled."

Don has a web site at http://n4kc.com/.

Scott Avery, WA6LIE of Salinas, California is also excited. On September 25 he wrote, "WOW! The SFI up to 190 and solar activity is on the rise! 10 meters today was like Field Day! Band was open to Europe, Africa, VK/ZL etc! Could randomly spin the dial in the SSB portion and find a signal. Reminds me of the late 80s when 10 was open most of the time. Look forward to the MUF getting up to 50 MHz.

"Saw a DX spot, F2 from a station in San Diego to New Caledonia on 6 meters. Looks promising! Time for the Technicians to get in there and work some DX!"

On September 25, a note from Nagoya: "This is JQ2UOZ (Name: 'Aki') of Nagoya, Japan. The band conditions on 12 meters have been excellent recently.

"Using an output power of only 500 mw QRPp and a dipole antenna, I was able to work FG5FR of Guadeloupe (Sep. 21) and YV1DIG of Venezuela (Sep. 23) on 12 meter band CW. The area around the Caribbean Sea is the most difficult area to work from Japan.

"In addition, using the same equipment, I was able to work K2ZJ of the State of New York on 12 meter band CW (Sep. 23). Surprisingly, according to an e-mail from him, he was using a very simple antenna, that is, a double extended Zepp for 17 meter band!!"

The double extended Zepp is a dipole 1.28 wavelengths long, or about 66 feet on 17 meters, but apparently K2ZJ used his on 12 meters.

Peter Laws, N5UWY is net control on a local 10 meter net in Norman, Oklahoma, and was surprised to hear Randy, KH6RC of Hawaii (actually in the same Big Island village that KH7Y is in) check into his net on September 22 at 0130z with a great signal, and everyone could hear and work him. Peter was surprised, but with recent solar activity, that report is not surprising. A check with W6ELprop shows that path would probably be open until at least 0300z. But run the same numbers again for July or August, and the results are much different: no likely propagation over that path.

WP3GW is also giddy with joy over recent propagation. He worked the CQ World Wide RTTY Contest, and says, "What a roll! Did 350 plus contacts, something I have never made before on a digital contest! This included 63 DXCC entities including 34 from Europe, plus 3 new countries on RTTY including DXpedition OJ0X, UN1L and OD5HJ. Also my friend Jose Rivera, KP4JRS, did 600 plus and Victor, NP4BM almost 900. Later learned about the 190 Solar Flux number! Even Europe came strong on 10 meters as of 1315 UTC on Sunday."

Jon Jones, N0JK of Kansas is active on 6 meters, and reports "Had a single hop F2 opening on 6M Sept 26 due to the geomagnetic storm that day. From Kansas I worked 9Y4VU and HP3TA, both on CW around 2215 UTC. Heard HC1HC, NP4A and the HK6FRC/b. Also heard the OA4TT/b FH16 on 50.077 MHz."

Sunspot numbers for September 22 through 28 were 86, 90, 88, 108, 103, 82, and 116, with a mean of 96.1. 10.7 cm flux was 150.8, 158.2, 190.4, 168.8, 148.2, 139, and 133.4, with a mean of 155.5. Estimated planetary A indices were 3, 3, 4, 4, 67, 30, and 24, with a mean of 19.3. Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 2, 2, 3, 4, 20, 22, and 13 with a mean of 9.4.

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown.
Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2008 FCC rules and Sep 2009 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/redbook/redbook.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day; frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Please e-mail suggestions and corrections to billmc@agora.rdrop.com.

Phone line as SW antenna

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area.
Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the | telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead.
Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should
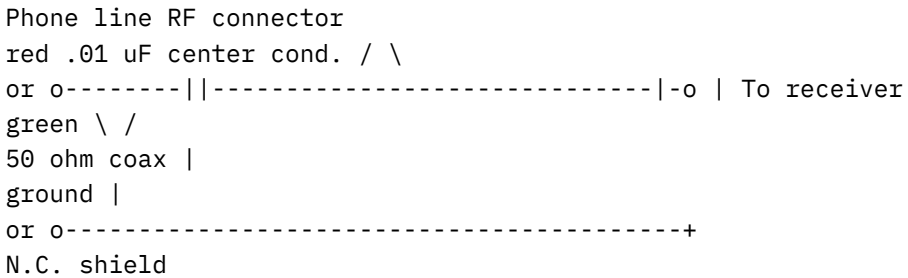
| be rated 250 volts or higher.



N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

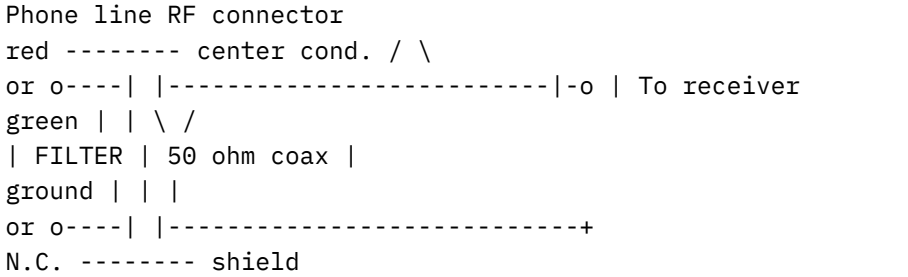
A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:



| RECOMMENDED FILTERS
| If you don't want to make your own filters, the following have good | performance, are well-built and affordable:
| Model 400 BCB interference filter (3.5 MHz highpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#bcb

| Model 420 HF lowpass filter (30 MHz lowpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#3
| (scroll down a bit to see the model 420)
| If you have a random-wire antenna, the following unit will provide | impedance matching and lightning protection (connect antenna to 450-ohm | terminal):
| Model 182A beverage matching unit

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

A sudden change in diet will do that. You should use Hill's or Science

Because
1) They didn't go there in large enough numbers to control the whole country
2) They were sent to take out a specific warlord
3) They project was undermanned and poorly planned by the powers that be
4) They then ran into a serious problem (Blackhawk Down)
5) The politicians then got cold feet and pulled out..

Why do you have to demonstrate such abyssal ignorance

You can read a lot of stuff, and it is good, indeed, the sum total of what any individual is, is based, mainly, on what they have learned from the world and others.

However, some point along your educations, after you have crossed over the very simple, been wham-boggled by the overly complex, and had the con men of the world teach you their lessons ... you finally have a complete enough picture to be able to create a model of the world in your mind.

For me, there are some very simple and basic truths, they were all available early on, but I could not see their importance ... now the fog is beginning to clear ...

Family is important ... today, more important than ever, and with the droves of children removed from their families, used as a source of income for foster families and then dumped, in many cases like trash, out on street with no support, this becomes staggeringly apparent -- indeed, we have created a whole army of these "citizens" to now fill our prisons -- and far into the future -- and we continue to do so at an alarming rate.

Friends are important, and in a world full of morons, imbeciles and idiots, never has the importance been more apparent. My grandmother once said to me that if, over the course of a lifetime, you were able to gather a mere small handful of friends, you were fortunate beyond belief ... I am embarrassed I took exception with her wisdom, back then ...

The realization that no less than this planet, the trees, the stars, the oceans, etc. YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO BE HERE! Your creator provided land, water, food, resources for you, to support your life, the family you would create, the rights for you to enjoy, the diversions to entertain you ... but, evil men and women were created to prevent you from enjoying your birth rights -- and it is a forever battle and takes your commitment to ensure you secure these, for yourself, your family, your friends, etc.

Today, there are strong attempts by criminals, and even by criminals in high places who illegal hold positions which were created to look out for people, to help and assist people, to push further the betterment of mankind, his pursuits, his rewards, the quality of his life, etc. Indeed, these institutions which were created by man, for man have now taken on a seeming life of their own -- they now attempt to enslave other groups of men, to control other groups of men -- even down to the control of others thoughts, actions and activities -- they now carry the actions of criminals because they are being run by criminals.

As you get caught up in the complexities, plans, schemes, contrivances, aspirations, goals, etc. of other men, it is easy to loose a grip on what is real, what is important, what has real meaning ... the time has simply come for men who have fallen asleep to awaken, to claim what is theirs, to do the right thing, and to restore sanity to an insane world ... actually, these are the best of times to live in, exciting, and like I have said, a time when there is ample opportunity of men of great worth and caliber to step forward and become the type of heroes which are immortalized in history ... each waking day advances us one small step towards the time of real men, again ...

JS

(Sorry, but I do not understand, what you want. Maybe it's a question of language. But could you please repeat your question with some other words.)

I didn't understand, what the US forces wanted to achieve in Somalia.
Maybe something like aid (for whom ??). Somehow they didn't get what they came for (my guess), but I don't know, what that was.

In any case Somalia was (and is) an extreme case of 'third world' and these 'war lords' had no real army. The greatest thread was - maybe- a Toyota pick-up with a AK47 mounted on top.

Somehow the US forces managed to loose a few of their high-tech helicopters, because they were shot down. (with bow and arrow?)

Then the US lost interest in that country and left it, worse then before.

So: where is the 'aid'? and what is the benefit for America from this adventure?

??? What ???
'Strawman' ? The translation 'Strohmann' in German is a person, that pretends to be an independent individual, but is secretly a puppet for somebody else (hidden).
'Your strawman' would mean, I had somebody in control????

Well, Somalia is larger than you think and is full of deserts and mountains. It could be real hard to find a certain individual, especially since they don't use all these electronic gadgets, individuals could usually be identified with.
But you don't want to tell me, the US army/navy/air force went there, to find a specific war lord. (?)

sorry, but this thread is a bit out of my usual range of subjects and are that wrong. But if you are interested, I can do a little bit of Seems even turd-burgers are in short supply in korea. Without enough people eating, there is not enough "meat" for the burgers!

So, naturally, the koreans are doing "the next best thing:"

http://flatrock.org.nz/topics/terrorism/north_koreans_eating_human_flesh.htm

Kinda like we why we couldn't find the death camps in germany, until too late, or the weapons of mass destruction in korea, because we are still looking in iraq! (hint: there is no oil and wealth in no. korea.)

Huh? The SP-101 is a relatively heavy gun for a snubbie. That is one of the complaints about it. If you think it is vicious in recoil, you really should stay away from any of the Scandiums from S&W, or the titaniums from Taurus. Keep in mind that in those light guns, most folks shooting .357 Mags, fire once, think "Holy Shit!!", fire another time and by the third round are looking for the exit. ;)

To me, there are several poly semi autos in 9mm that the recoil in is heavier than an SP-101 in .357 Mag. Hell, the SP-101 in .327 Federal feels like a fart compared to a windstorm. ;)

Sp-101 is the shot, is it not? The 5 shot .357 is what I shot. Maybe it was the grips. I like recoil but to much is enough.

And I looked at the Scandiums and almost coughed up a lung laughing. I have my 642(?) blued, concealed hammer, airweight 5 shot Jframe and I like it plenty. Just use good bullets and practice.

Self abuse is supposed to be pleasureable, isn't it? 8)

Oh, well........I have carried one for over twenty years. Used it as an adjunct to my old(?) GP-100 with a 3" bbl. Sold the GP-100 (what a mistake that was) and now have the three SP-101s. However, if they would make a GP100 in .44 spl, I would buy another one in heartbeat.

That airweight Jframe should be at least as abusive as the SP-101. You are looking at 11 ounces (J frame) compared to 25 ounces (SP-101) Both empty.

As long as the gun fits..... it is pleasurable to shoot. One reason why there are so many choices out there.

Liberty Net: September 24, 2011

http://3950.net/2011/10/liberty-net-september-24-2011/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE FIRST AUTUMN SESSION of the Liberty Net showed the promise of good propagation, low noise, and fine comradeship coupled with the free exchange of ideas that can remake our world.

Here are some of the ideas debated this week on amateur radioï¿½s longest-running discussion net:

ï¿½ Why is there a near-total corporate media blackout on the Occupy Wall Street protests now going on? Could it be because both Left and Right have figured out where the real problem lies? (14 minutes)

ï¿½ Is the near-immobility of 401K funds ï¿½ you canï¿½t quickly switch out of a falling stock in a few seconds, like you can in a self-directed IRA ï¿½ something that was purposely designed into the system? (33 minutes)

ï¿½ The bankers are already trying to punish Iceland for refusing to ï¿½pay backï¿½ some of their fictitious ï¿½loans,ï¿½ but so far all theyï¿½ve done is refuse to ï¿½lendï¿½ them any new money ï¿½ which is probably a good thing anyway. Disengaging entirely from the fractional reserve banking system would be best. (38 minutes)

ï¿½ The media are mostly ignoring it now, but the Japanese nuclear disaster continues, and may well create huge dead zones in the Pacific Ocean. (46 minutes)

ï¿½ George W. Bush was recently forced to cancel a trip to Canada because of the very real possibility that he would be arrested on war crimes charges there. (55 minutes)

ï¿½ According to W1WCR, the mainstream media are now being bypassed to the point where they can hardly be called mainstream anymore. In fact, the once-dominant news shows seem more devoted to patent medicine sales than to news these days. (59 minutes)

ï¿½ In a time of painful unemployment, why are Chinese laborers being brought in to build a major bridge in California? (1 hour 53 minutes)

ï¿½ As Detroit is turning into a combination post-industrial wasteland and feral human jungle, thieves are now openly stealing all the metal siding off numerous houses. (1 hour 56 minutes)

ï¿½ All high human civilizations are based largely on promises ï¿½ both moral and financial. When we have the kind of citizen whose promises cannot be trusted, civilization falls. (2 hours 5 minutes)

ï¿½ There is no country left in the world where White people can live and raise their families that is not being invaded by fast-breeding others. That is genocide. (3 hours 44 minutes)

In addition to checking in and experiencing the Liberty Net over the air, you can log on Saturday evenings beginning at 10PM Eastern for live audio feeds of the Net.

All our thanks go to N2SAG and N2IRJ and especially W1WCR for their hard work which makes the Liberty Net and its Internet adjuncts possible. The N2SAG live audio feed and chat room is temporarily down, so use the N2IRJ feed as an alternative for those who want to listen and chat live. Remember, you can download the mp3 recordings of the net right here at http://3950.net and listen in your gym, or on your way to work, or anywhere you choose.

Yeah but the .38, even the +P don't seem as vigorous as .357. Maybe it was the rounds we were shooting. I have a 2.5" M-19 (old FBI trade in form when they went to the 10mm, very slick) that is easy to shoot even with hot loads. It has Pachmyar RB grips though. I really think it is about the grips in a lot of cases.

I'm kinda funny about what I'll carry though. The guns i do carry have been flawless or very easily adjusted by myself. Anything to untoward I get uncomfortable. Had a Taurus 85CH. Great gun. Firing pin broke. Even though they fized it under warranty and I'm sure it was fine I just couldn't put it in my pocket again. Ended up selling it.

Same thing with the 101. Bad first impression makes me less likely to go back for more. Not saying it's a bad gun, enough people swear by them. It's just personal preference.

I had a Super Blackhawk in .44 Mag. You know the one with the squared trigger guard? I loved it until the first session at the range. The damn corner tore the Hell outta my knuckles. I was holdling it right, it's just the way it recoiled.

OTOH my wife has the Ruger Mk II. Love it. Great to shoot. And my heavy barrel 10/22? It's indecent how much I love that thing. I have to watch when I shooting it because I can go through a LOT of .22 in an afternoon, it's such a pleasure to shoot.

I use steel plate swingers and just try to keep 'em moving so I don't have to worry about changing out paper targets. Man it's a blast!

I have three.....a New Model Blackhawk, a Colt SAA, and a Taurus 445. I also have one .44Mag, a Sporting Arms, Inc Seville Sheriff's model. I carried the Taurus for a long time. I also had and sold two Rossi 720Cs.
Excellent guns. Smooth trigger in operation but I didn't like the feel of it where it was grooved. I smoothed one of them out but not the other. Got too good an offer for them.

It's not but both of the guns I mentioned there are available as .357s.
Additionally, just 'cause one has a .357, it doesn't make it that you must shoot .357s in it. I know several folks with .357 snubbies who carry .38 spl +P or +P+ in them.

Maybe it

Grips make a big difference. My 445 didn't come with the Ribber grip that Taurus makes but it can be added. That Ribber grip does come with the titanium model, just not the steel one.

it means well.

I don't believe he should have to provide a receipt, since selling any wine to your kind is against the law.

But, if yer talking about coming over to his house to steal stuff, just to find out if he can (and/or will) use deadly force against you, why the paper work?

I gave you my address several times when YOU(and your mentally challenged brethren) double dog dared me to post my address, so that they come steal MY stuff, because I have FIREARMS!

I called your bluff, and yet, here I still am, untouched, unbroken-into, no shots fired, never even a Christmas card!

Why?
Because I TOLD you that I will harm you VERY substantially within seconds of unlawfully entering.

I then said I would post pictures of your "body" on the Interweb for all to see.
Once it's on that... THAT'S IT!
YER INFAMOUS!

What's the hold up?

In Russia, pregnant women about to give birth in the cabbage fields/potato fields/whatever, they would lay down on the ground and give birth, then they would wrap the baby in a cloth, then those women would get up and go right back to work.
I read about that in a book about forty years ago.

I don't 'have to ask these questions'. Somalia was an example, but I could have taken another invasion and ask, why that was done and were there is any befit from this.

In a century the USA fought - maybe - two hundred wars. That was a lot of 'help' (military aid) to the world. But neither the world nor the USA look particularly happy.

You see, the subject of this thread were small arms and how they could be used for self-defence - apparently against the own government. That is no sign for a population, that really trusts the government. And this is not, how a particularly happy society looks like (preparing for civil war). So, were is the benefit?

3160. SDR recommendations?

After the prior post mentioning SDR radios, and me seeing how they work withe the web radios, I am now intrigued by the concept. There are several DIY and assembled brands used, with SoftRock being among the best price. However, SoftRock does not appear to be available at this time and several other brands may be "retired" as well.

What would be recommended? I don't want to spend a fortune, but still want decent quality, preferably covering the HF bands. SSB, AM, FM. I see a brand called Elektor SDR offering assembled kits under $150 US. However, some people have problems with setup and a weak receiver. Now they have a preamp for another $75 or so.

Appreciate any thoughts on the subject.

Thanks,
Ted Ham

And how many wars did the Euros start and fight during that time ?
And how many Euros are particularly proud or happy about those wars

The big difference in the great majority of wars where the US got involved are
1) It was to help someone else
2) It was to avoid someone else becoming the victim of statists
There never was any guarantee that ALL of such attempts would be 100 % well executed or successful.
But unlike countries like yours, the US has a far better record than anyone else.

I'm sure all those Jews, gypsies, and others whom the German government exterminated felt safe and secure in Germany right before it happened
There are tales of many people, who later ended in camps, who felt that it just couldn't happen to them

Only fools who have learned nothing from history would actually trust and keep trusting governments Governments are tools to serve people
But to often in the past, the tables were turned and the people ended up serving the few who controlled government.

That you fatuously claim, that it's therefore a sign of unhappiness, just goes to show that you have been happily ingesting the government supplied lotus leaves for far too long.

I have a G5 that I got on sale. As a receiver, it is fine, but I would not describe its operation in its various modes as intuitive: I always have to refer to the manual to get it back to the way I want it. I bought it to be a travel radio, and it does this poorly. There is no master power switch (like on my various Sony 7600s), so the radio can get switched on accidentally while it is packed away. And the roatry tuning knob is not very securely attached, so mine has fallen off several times while packed amongst my clothes. I suppose the G3 would have similar operational features.

I owned a first production run PL-660 which had audio overload issues due to improper interfacing of the multi-detector output with the audio amp.
AFAIK this issue (and some other minor intermod issues) were addresses long ago. The current runs are pretty much problem free and owner satisfaction seems quite a bit higher than with the Sangean ATS909X which costs much more (as I discovered).

Any specific issues, there is a Yahoo group devoted to this model.

Don't own, but had shopped that market. Both models seems to have QC issues and durability issues. Both seems to have issues with high susceptibility to front-end overload with bleed through of garbage from other bands. The sync detector on the G3 was poisoned by an overly enthusiastic Degen reaction to an unwarranted complaint by a Chinese beta tester; eventually they got it right. I never acted on it, but at the end of my shop around I had decided that between the two I would have gone for the G5.

I own both. Though they look virtually identical, they are very different radios. The G3 is the better radio, if you can find one with a properly functioning sync detector. I thought I had, but the sync detector went out after the warranty expired. Some folks think the G5 is more sensitive,but I think that's primarily from the louder upper limit of audio volume on the G5. Both portables are subcompact, very sensitive, and have incredibly low noise floors. A cheap G5 is hard to pass by... I actually own several.

Both receivers also have a software lock button to keep them from being accidentally turned on. Overload is possible, but can usually be dealt with by placing sensitivity in the LOCAL position. Eton customer service is actually pretty impressive, as I'm currently working with them to get the G3 fixed. I also own both the Sony 7600G and 7600GR, and I think the operation of either Grundig is more intuitive and overall enjoyable than the Sonys.

I have used an Eton E5 (same radio as Grundig G5) for years and it has worked great. When I got a Grundig G3 shortly after it came out, I experienced some problems with it. I've heard the newer G3 radios have corrected some of these problems, but I haven't tried a newer one.

Here's my initial review of the G3:

Hi, I can talk about the G3.

Sensitivity is very good as selectivity. For sure one of the best portable radio for these characteristics.

Ergonomic is OK, but I'm really missing a sound volume knob and an antenna gain knob.

Compared to G5, the G3 has the AIR band and sync detect on AM, but is lacking the back-lighted keyboard : if your using your radio at night in your bed this can be helpfull. On my G3 the sync detection is so-so : when properly engaged it is really impressive, but quickly (< 5 mn) the sound can go distorted when the sync miss its job. That was my main criteria for buying a G3 after three other radio : Sangean 909, Sony SW100, Tecsun PL390. The sync detect of the SW100 is less effective at least but works forever...

As a travel radio, I prefer the ergonomics of the Tecsun, and if you consider the G3 without the sync detect (since it is defective on my radio), overall performance is similar.

The G3 gets overloaded by long antennas connected to the antenna input jack (tried reel antenna, my home antenna, ...). It's OK with AN-LP1 or KA31 active loops. I have more success with smaller reel antenna clipped on the whip (5m or less).

As a DX machine, I prefer the Sangean 909 with an external antenna (random wire when traveling, fixed wire on the roof with ground in the garden when at home).

On the G3 I have issues with the keyboard : often when pressing a key, the function of a neighboring key is fired (ex: you press '5' and a '4' is displayed instead...) Very annoying for a radio of that price. I send it back for warranty service, but it came back with the same issue (just less frequent).

So the G3 could have been a winner if there was not so many small, but disappointing defects. Today I'm barely using it. The Sangean 909 is my bedside radio, the Tecsun PL390 my general travel radio (when not using the Sangean), the SW100 the tiny radio I put in my pocket when traveling "light".

Hope this helps,

Charly

Hi again,

I forgot to mention one VERY good point on the G3 : using USB and LSB is very comfortable compared to my other radios with this feature. Voices heard in that mode are very natural and adjustment is easy to do.

If you listen to hams, then this can be a good criteria.

You are right and Europeans fought even more wars than the USA, especially the UK, that holds the unofficial award for the most militaristic society on the planet.

(Personally I think, that Hitler was an English spy, but that is my personal opinion only. Another is, that England regards the USA as a colony and uses its military to perform a few more invasions.)

Yes, agreed. The USA usually win wars - but looses the peace. That seems to be a general pattern, that I do not understand.

I do not want to justify the crimes of the German government in the so called 3rd Reich. Germany lost the war and was almost totally destroyed.

Then the Nazis have left Germany, mainly in the direction of South America. But a god part went to the USA. These Nazis are dangerous people, especially to their host.

No, I don't agree. In a democracy the government is 'We, the people...'.
These governments should never be a thread to their own people. That seems to be an American speciality, that we don't have in Germany.

Great read. As always, lots of fun. ah, some day, if I live long enough to retire. Kudo's on your loop, would never part with mine. BTW, your not the first person to complain about the SDR. Thanks again John.

The most recent book by John Ringo, "The Hot Gate", actually addresses that point (albeit indirectly) quite well.
Think of it as 2 tribes that control the government
One group, basically wants to be left alone to do their thing. But if they get pissed off, they will go to war, and make sure they win
The other group, is the opposite, they believe that you can negotiate with anyone about everything. They usually end up screwing the pooch, and giving away just about everything group one gains.
Vietnam is a prime example
The military did not want to be there. The soldiers didn't want to be there
But they went and fought and basically gained a military victory.
Which the politicians then managed to turn into a defeat.

Yu are either very ignorant or very confused
Go tell to the millions of Germans, not to mention others who were exterminated in one way or another during the previous century, by Germany and other countries.
The US is not even close to those numbers.

There are VERY FEW other countries where the citizens are quite safe from abuses of their own governments.
And contrary to what most Europeans like to imagine about themselves, the US is WAY AHEAD of them in that context.

As an aside, I would suggest you read "The Hot Gate" and "The Last Centurion", by John Ringo, for their political and social commentary.

You seem to be confused with the meaning of the word "war"

Wounded knee was one incident in the Indian wars..

You seem to confuse all kinds of individual INCIDENTS with wars...

Why don't you come back with a list of WARS...
Your claim would be more honest AND credible

It was - of course - not my list. This list was copied from the website
I have quoted.
But I had a different one, called 'American interventions' (or alike), where even more - well - interventions were listed (if you don't like 'war'). You can call it 'military aid' if you like, too, or 'defending the free world', 'defeating terrorism' - or whatever diminutive was ever invented.

Oh no, you are confused, the royalty of england had it just the way they liked it, before our forefathers pointed out what real freedom is, and insisted upon having it ... a thing which has been stolen away, in the last few decades, buy the would-be-royalty now inhabiting our public servant offices ... our gangsters, like the one in the white house, have their corresponding counterparts in your country ...

A liberal democracy may take various constitutional forms: it may be a constitutional republic, such as the United States, France, Germany, Italy, or India, or a constitutional monarchy, such as the United Kingdom, Spain, or Japan. It may have a presidential system (the United States, Brazil, Mexico, Argentina), a semi-presidential system (France, Russia, Poland, Ukraine), or a parliamentary system (the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, India).-wikipedia

Liberal democracy is a form of representative democracy where elected representatives that hold the decision power are moderated by a constitution that emphasizes protecting individual liberties and the rights of minorities in society, such as freedom of speech and assembly, freedom of religion, the right to private property and privacy, as well as equality before the law and due process under the rule of law, and many more.

Such constitutional rights, also named liberal rights, are guaranteed through various controlled institutions and various statutory laws. Additionally the constitution of most of the contemporary liberal democracies protects the rights of individuals and minorities, and prohibits the will of majority (majoritarianism), by almost eliminating that rule in practice.

Some would argue that liberal democracy isn't democratic or liberal at all. They would argue that "liberal democracy" does not respect majority rule, except when citizens are asked to vote for their representatives, and also that its "liberty" is restricted by the constitution or precedent decided by previous generations. They would argue that, by prohibiting citizens the right to cast votes on all issues—especially for serious subjects like going to war, constitutional amendments or constitution abolishment etc.—this turns "liberal democracy" into the precursor of oligarchy.

Others would say that only a liberal democracy can guarantee the individual liberties of its citizens and prevent the development into a dictatorship. Unmoderated majority rule could—in this view—lead to an oppression of minorities.-wisegeek

I see. But isn't especially the USA more than well equipped with personal, that is supposed to provide security?

If so, why then should each individual be burden with that task, too.
In my country we usually don't carry guns around. I don't have the feeling, this fact would lower my state of security.

Actually arms are dangerous - even for the owner - and I don't believe, that armed self-defence is the best of all possible ways to deal with the problem of crime.

If there are so many agencies, police officers, FBI, ATF, FEMA, homeland-security, ..., why shouldn't they do something useful.
The problem I see, that these agencies are not really trusted, but seem to be the former criminals, now with official status and better weapons.

If that is the case, than your country is really f*.

Don't confuse being "Happy with our form of Government" VS RELYING on a Government/Police Force that can't ensure/insure our PERSONAL SAFETY.

Because they CAN not, HAVE not, WILL not, AND ARE not obligated to do so.

Police are merely "a thing" you call AFTER a crime is committed, or is taking place.

Normal people are allowed to defend themselves AS IT TAKES PLACE!

Therefore, I LOVE my "form of Government" that allows me as a citizen, to protect my life, my wifes life, our childrens and neighbors and other others lives, so that that "we" can live on, work, and pay silly taxes. :)

Or... if you live in Detroit, or Trenton, NJ!

And again, I never had a "need" for a gun, so far.
I just "want" them in case.

For instance, NOBODY said you MUST have fire extinguishers or smoke detectors in certain dwellings.

Sure glad I had plenty of both in '95 when our dryer decided to go ballistic due to a faulty electrical malfunction INSIDE the dryer.

Took 20 minutes for the Fire Dept to show up after we called 911, and the FD was only 3/4 miles away!

And I already killed the power, and put the fire out!

In all fairness, the FD did provide me with some really cool Oxygen when they eventually showed up.

Never had that bottled stuff before!

I suggested that they add something "minty".

The hacker group Anonymous says the recent announcement that it will attack the New York Stock Exchange is actually a false flag operation to mar the Occupy Wall Street protests.

The initial threat, posted on Monday said that on October 10 the Anonymous would launch a Distributed Denial of Service (DDoS) attack on NYSE, which would “erase” it “from the internet”.

Over past years, similar attacks have brought down websites of several organizations, which the hacktivists targeted for their actions like prosecuting online pirates or obstructing the whistleblower site WikiLeaks.

The new attack was dubbed Invade Wall Street in parallel to the ongoing country-wide protests.

“We… declare a popular war against the New York Stock Exchange. The 10th of October is a day that will never be forgotten,” a statement posted from the group’s name says.

However, as the FBI assured that it is investigating the supposed future cyber attack, the Anonymous group came up with a denial.

“Operation Invade Wall Street is bullshit! It is a fake planted operation by law enforcement and cyber crime agencies in order to get you to undermine the Occupy Wall Street movement,” the new statement said.

The text went on to expose an alleged plan of those behind the operation to make supporters of the Anonymous reveal their identities by using flawed software in the attack on NYSE.

The events resemble the August threat to take down the social network Facebook, which Anonymous first voiced and later retracted.

The fuss around the stock exchange may actually be a clever plot by law enforcers using the masked nature of the hacktivist movement against them, an action by a rival online community with goals different to those voiced by the Anonymous earlier, or simply faction struggle within the group itself. The general public can only guess.

I'm so sorry that you are so myopic
You are making a bunch of stupid presumptions Who said that:
1) "small guns" are for protection against the government ?
2) "small guns" are NOT useable for protection against the Government ?
3) the government is some "monolithic beast" that can only be addressed with BIG guns ?
- Government agents are people who may come at you individually
OR in large numbers
4) the government is the ONLY source of threat to individuals
- try criminals as an althernate threat

5) The RKBA is only applicable to "small guns" ?

I will also point out that in the US
1) Self-defense is a considered a right
2) It is a right that is in part protected under the 2nd Amendment's "Right to Keep and Bear Arms".
- See the Heller and Macdonald decisions of the US Supreme Court

I'm so sorry that your "feeling of security" is based on ignorance.
Are you claining that when it comes down to it, you are NOT responsible for YOUR security and that of your loved ones ?
And instead are willing to be irresponsible and depend on others for it
If one day a criminal decides to invade your home, or attack you on the street, - How will you respond ?
Will you do like so many Europeans did about 60 years ago ?
Obediently go along and be shipped of to camps to be disposed of ?

In the US, armed citizens shoot more than twice the criminals than the police do
Yet at the same time, the allegedly highly trained police shoot over 6 times more innocent bystanders, than plain old citizens do. (That should raise some flags about who is a safer to you than not).

Your "state of security" is based on ignorant presumptions and a willigness to abrogate your responsibility to yourself, your family and your fellow citizens.

> Actually arms are dangerous - even for the owner

Actually, arms are INANIMATE OBJECTS that are no more dangerous than ANY OTHER inanimate objects
It's the user of the arms that affects how dangerous they are

> - and I don't believe, that armed self-defence is the best of all possible > ways to deal with the problem of crime.

I'm so sorry that you believe such ignorant nonsense Tell me, if someone decides that you are the perfect target for his next crime. Which could be anything from simple robbery to murder.
Who is ULTIMATELY responsible for your defense against such a criminal attack ?
You ?
Or someone else ?

And what makes you think that someone else will be
a) motivated to come to your aid ?

b) able and willing t come to your aid ?
c) able, willing AND AVAILABLE IN TIME, to come to your aid ?

> If there are so many agencies, police officers, FBI, ATF, FEMA, > homeland-security, ..., why shouldn't they do something useful.

Well, they have different jurisdictions, responsibilities and duties
Sometimes overlapping, most often not.

Then there is the issue that the police have NO DUTY for the protection of individuals
(This is most likely also true in your country.)
If you call 911 and the police are busy elsewhere with something they consider more critical, you will end up waiting for them to show up.
Unlike you, MANY Americans prefer to be able to defend themselves while the police get there Not to mention that in some jurisdictions in the US, the distances are so great, that just getting to you can take not just minutes, BUT TENS of minutes.
So what are you supposed to do while you're waiting for them to show up.

> The problem I see, that these agencies are not really trusted, but seem to > be the former criminals, now with official status and better weapons.

You should be one to speak
One only has to look at the MILLIONS of people killed in Europe by various government "agencies" over the last century.
Compared to Europe the US is a safe haven from such DEADLY RISK.

> If that is the case, than your country is really f*.

Not surprised that you come to such stupid conclusions when one sees all the nonsensical and ignorant presumptions you use to get there.

Ok I don't understand the US society!

If a country has a certain population and has a government and all sorts of personal, than this personal, employed by the country, should somehow work for the country - and not against.

A certain individual has a certain job in the large machine of the society - say a teacher. Than the people pay this person to teach their kids and that is what the person is supposed to do - no more, no less.

If they employ a policemen, this person should bring some sort of justice to a district, because the criminals are prosecuted.

That these personal does, what it should, you have laws, that tell these employees, what to do (and what not).

These laws are figured out by the government, what in some respect belongs to the personal, too, hence should make just and useful laws (and nothing else).

If that isn't what happens, but the government tries to threaten the own population, than we have a lawless situation, where government and its personal only pretends to work for the people, that pay for them.

If you don't believe, you may read this (or type 'REX 84' into google)
FEMA Concentration Camps:
Locations and Executive Orders
http://www.mindfully.org/Reform/2004/FEMA-Concentration-Camps3sep04.htm#1

As I said, the Nazis are a dangerous bread.

Btw- the word concentration camp is badly 'germanized' in "Konzentrationslager" (from the original English roots), because the German language uses a different linguistic picture, that is more like the English word 'to collect' for 'sammeln'. In German you would say "Sammellager" (English: Concentration camp), but not "Konzentrationslager", because in German to concentrate ("konzentrieren") means to think hard.

So these camps are an Anglo-Saxion speciality and first invented by Cecil Rhodes.

Anyhow..
Size and location of these camps are a hint, that the intended inmates are Americans, what I regard as a hint for a not generally trustful government.

That is blatant nonsense!
If you want less crime in your country, than it's better to solve a few problems, than to send in troops.

Crimes are usually not unavoidable like bad weather. It is a sign of a degenerated society, that people believe, they could only survive, if they run around with arms.

The society is responsible for the security of the country. That's why you have an army and a police. The individual should be able to trust in these organisations.

So how could you avoid crime? Well, that's where I have started. If people in general in a society are (in average) more healthy, happy, employed, sober, clean and moral, you have less crimes. (or vice versa)

If you have a lot of psychopaths running around with heavy guns, than things get dangerous.

This is why I think, the police shall provide security for the general public. This general public in return controls the police - to keep the policemen within the bounds of the law.

The individual person may possibly have a gun or shot on a shooting range. But you cannot possibly believe, that citizens should carry out their troubles with firearms.

To have an alternative to violence you need a trustful jurisdiction and understandable and practical laws (what the U.S all don't have). This is why I would recommend reforming the civil laws, rather than the civil armament.

Hmmmm....meanwhile the UK has one of the highest violent crime rates among the leading nations.

And we see how well that society worked as London burned this summer.

So clearly trying to keep people from having arms, doesn't necessarily mean crimes won't occur.

The true measure isn't by how much people have had their arms removed, but whether they chose not to engage in crime whether they have arms or not.

It isn't the arms that cause crime, but the will to do so. Removing arms, doesn't alter the will. One can ALWAYS find a way if they decide crime is what they desire.

> The society is responsible for the security of the country. That's why you

I agree they should be able to trust these organization, but that doesn't mean they shouldn't be able to provide for themselves should this trust be misplaced, or simply the organizations can't be everywhere 24/7/365.

> So how could you avoid crime? Well, that's where I have started. If people > in general in a society are (in average) more healthy, happy, employed,

Actually only ONE of those criteria is really relevant. Moral. Everything else is conditions that overcome ones morals.

So the issue is with these things, these are the causes of crime....so why are you wasting time trying to control one means of instrumentality rather than deal with the causes?

> If you have a lot of psychopaths running around with heavy guns, than > things get dangerous.

Hate to tell you this, but if you have a lot a psychopaths running around things are going to get dangerous whether guns are legal or not.

See, they can always gets guns illegally, or they may simply turn to another means, such as bombs, traps, poison, and so on.

The whys that one can commit a violent crime is limited only by one's imagination....not whether they can legally buy a gun.

> This is why I think, the police shall provide security for the general > public.

They try to do so, however, since their concern is for the general public, that means that individuals are often, well, on their own.

>This general public in return controls the police - to keep the policemen >within the bounds of the law.

And yet regularly we find policemen who are outside the bounds of the law.

> The individual person may possibly have a gun or shot on a shooting range.
> But you cannot possibly believe, that citizens should carry out their > troubles with firearms.

Yep, but if they are going to do so, whether they legally have guns, or not isn't going to significantly alter their ability to carry out their troubles on others, Either with an illegal firearms, or simply some other means.

> To have an alternative to violence you need a trustful jurisdiction and > understandable and practical laws (what the U.S all don't have).

Neither does the UK.

> This is why I would recommend reforming the civil laws, rather than the > civil armament.

Sorry, but civil law isn't the issue. Every crime is already illegal. Reforming the laws isn't going to change this. Until you can eliminate the causes of crime, why should one provide for their own defense just in cause the military or police fail to do so when needed as needed? If people are armed when there is no crime, then who cares? As long as they aren't engaging in crime, then what difference does it make if they chose to be armed or not?

In short, I think you're spending too much time on the instrumentality and trying to control it, and no enough realizing that people will break the law when they chose to do so. Address why they chose to do so, and you can eliminate most crime. However you can never eliminate all crime because some people chose to commit crime only because they want to, and no other reason. "They just want to watch the world burn. " Because it gives them something that they simply can't have in any legal society.

You can also search by country to discover that Google, the owner of You Tube, has complied with the majority of requests from governments, particularly in the United States and the UK, not only to remove You Tube videos, but also specific web search terms and thousands of “data requests,” meaning demands for information that would reveal the true identity of a You Tube user. Google claims that the information sent to governments is “needed for legitimate criminal investigations,” but whether these “data requests” have been backed up by warrants is not divulged by the company.

HELLO ???
Earth to TH..
Come in TH...

What are you blabbering about ?
What "troops have been sent" for what "crimes" ??

> Crimes are usually not unavoidable like bad weather. It is a sign of a

1) NO ONE EXCEPT YOU is claiming that "crimes were unavoidable"
Your stupid strawman - you feed it
2) NO ONE EXCEPT YOU is claiming that people "could only survive, if they run around with arms"
Your stupid strawman - you feed it
3) But there is also NO GUARANTEE that you will not be the target of a criminal
And no matter what and how much social engineering you attempt - there will be criminals and there will be people targeted by those criminals.

As to your cheap slur of a "degenerate society"...
My metric for that is as follows.
A society that allows
- the murder of over 6 million people in the same number of years
- the murder of over 50 million people in a neighboring country in the same number of years
- starts and participates in a couple of wars that result in the deaths of millions of people, military and civilian in a single century
- that consistently disarms it's population to make them helpless against criminals both in and out of governments

Ironically, the above describe YOUR country and your neighbors
Yet it does NOT apply to the US

Maybe you need to look at yourself, and the history of your people and countries before you do cheap and ignorant slander on others

> The society is responsible for the security of the country. That's why you > have an army and a police. The individual should be able to trust in these

So how does YOUR country live up to that standard over say the last 100 years ?
You're real strong on theory but fail miserably on execution.
The Opposite seems to be true for the US

In the US, historically most people have ALWAYS viewed themselves as the "first responders" to bad situations. This is actually a continuation of what was true in England up to WWII.
And therefore, it's part of the mindset that you do NOT sit around and wait for the "authorities" to come and solve your problems and fix thing for you.
That has been changing (for the worse) with the increasing number of people buying into the "socialist" mindset that you spout above

Here is a most appropriate editorial comment that appeared today that talks about this issue..

More ivory-tower theory totally disconnected from reality
It sure sounds good
And idiots like you have been spouting that nonsense since Rousseau
But then when we actually LOOK at your history and see how that theory has panned out over time, we realize that it's nice fantasy totally UNRELATED to reality.

Again with the nice theory..
How has that been working for say the last 100 years in Europe ?
And then there is the problem is that in most countries, ALTHOUGH there is a belief that the police have a duty to protect them, there is probably also some law that states that they have no such duty or responsibility

IN the US, we have 2 US Supreme Court Decisions (Warner, I believe, is the name of one) which CLEARLY STATE, that unless you have a previous relationship (such as witness protection), the police have NO DUTY to come to the aid or protect individual citizens.
So, MOST DEFINITELY in the US, your theory is pure fantasy..

> The individual person may possibly have a gun or shot on a shooting range.
> But you cannot possibly believe, that citizens should carry out their > troubles with firearms.

What exactly do you mean by "carry out their troubles with firearms"
Is that some stupid code for criminal behavior ?

And what do propose that a person being held up at an ATM do ?
Dial 911 and hope for the best ?
How about a woman who is being assaulted, with the possibility of being raped or even killed in the immediate future ?

Should she also dial 911 and hope for the best ??
Fortunately in the US, we are far more civilized than people in degenerate societies like yours
We STILL believe that people HAVE A RIGHT NOT to be the victims of criminals, whether those criminals are civilian or government agents...

> To have an alternative to violence you need a trustful jurisdiction and > understandable and practical laws (what the U.S all don't have).

TOTAL IGNORANT BULLSHIT
I doubt that the laws in your country are any more "understandable and practical" that US laws
But hey, go ahead and prove me wrong..

> This is why I would recommend reforming the civil laws, rather than the > civil armament.

I would recommend instead that you get yourself an education in history and law
Then you would stop spouting such arrant nonsense based on stupid presumptions that are based on abyssal ignorance...

3272. OCCUPY THE FED! - A Warning for ‘Occupy Wall Street’

"While I fully endorse the efforts and actions of the Occupy Wall Street protests, now emerging internationally, there are concerns which need to be addressed and kept in mind as the movement moves forward.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oneVFYeMHjU

"The process through which a potentially powerful movement may be co-opted and controlled is slight and subtle. If Occupy Wall Street hopes to strive for the 99%, it must not submit to the 1%, in any capacity.

"The Occupy movement must prevent what happened to the Tea Party movement to happen to it. Whatever ideological stance you may have, the Tea Party movement started as a grass roots movement, largely a result of anti-Federal Reserve protests. They were quickly co-opted with philanthropic money and political party endorsements.

"For the Occupy Movement to build up and become a true force for change, it must avoid and reject the organizational and financial ‘contributions’ of institutions: be they political parties, non-profits, or philanthropic foundations. The efforts are subtle, but effective: they seek to organize, professionalize, and institutionalize a movement, push forward the issues they desire, which render the movement useless for true liberation, as these are among the very institutions the movement should be geared against.

"This is not simply about “Wall Street,” this is about POWER. Those who have power, and those who don’t. When those who have power offer a hand in your struggle, their other hand holds a dagger. Remain grassroots, remain decentralized, remain outside and away from party politics, remain away from financial dependence. Freedom is not merely in the aim, it’s in the action.

"The true struggle is not left versus right, democrat versus republican, liberal versus conservative, or libertarian versus socialist. The true struggle is that of people against the institution: the State, the banks, the central banking system, the corporation, the international financial institutions, the military, the political parties, the mainstream media, philanthropic foundations, think tanks, university, education, psychiatry, the legal system, the church, et. al.

http://thepeoplesbookproject.com/2011/09/20/a-revolutionary-idea-for-a-revolutionary-time-a-plan-of-action-for-the-global-political-awakening/

]

"The transfer of power from one institution to another does not solve the crisis of our ‘institutional society,’ whereby a few have come to dominate so much, to concentrate so much power at the expense of everyone else having so little. True liberation will result only from opposition to ‘the institution’ as an entity. Placating power from one institution to another renders resistance ineffective. The power structures must be discredited, and power must be distributed to the people, through voluntary associations, communal groupings, and people-powered (and people-funded!) initiatives.

http://thepeoplesbookproject.com/2011/09/20/a-revolutionary-idea-for-a-revolutionary-time-a-plan-of-action-for-the-global-political-awakening/
]

"In order to survive as a movement, money will become a necessity. Do not turn to the non-profits and philanthropic foundations for support. The philanthropies, which fund and created the non-profits and NGOs, were themselves created to engage in ‘social engineering’: to ‘manufacture consent’ among the governed, and create consensus among the governors. The philanthropies (particularly those of Carnegie, Ford, and Rockefeller) fund social movements and protest organizations so as to steer them into directions which are safe for the elites. The philanthropies are themselves run by the elite, founded by bankers and industrialists striving to preserve their place at the top of the social structure in the midst of potentially revolutionary upheaval. As the president of the Ford Foundation once said, “Everything the foundation does is to make the world safe for capitalism.”

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/funderProfile.asp?fndid=5208
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/funderProfile.asp?fndid=5322]

"Money from philanthropies will organize the movement into a more professionalized entity, will direct its efforts around the promotion of legalistic reform, making slight changes to the system’s symptoms, promoting particular legislation, rallying around very specific issues removed from their global historical context. The effect is to turn anti-system revolutionaries into legalistic reformers. With such funding, movement organizers are drawn into the world of NGOs, international conferences, international institutions, aid agencies, and mainstream political participation. The leaders of the movement become professionalized and successful, both in prestige and finances. Thus, their own personal position becomes dependent upon promoting reform, not revolution; on maintaining the system (with minor changes to the aesthetic), not moving against it. The movement itself, then, would be institutionalized.

"For the finances to grow without the threat of institutional dominance, the money must come from the people. A truly populist cause could be funded by the people. Keep the people in charge.

"If we truly want freedom and liberation, we must begin to act free and liberated. If we want the ‘true liberation,’ we must understand the true system of power that confines, oppresses, segregates, exploits, impoverishes, and controls us. It is not a matter of the state or the banks or the corporations. It is a matter of the institution, itself. The structures of power must be struggled against so that we may come to liberate humanity from all that confines it, and experience what our true ‘human nature’ is.

"If one studies mice in a maze, no matter for how long or what the maze is built of, looks like, feels like, you cannot deduce the nature of the mouse separate from that of the maze. Break down the maze and you may observe the true nature of the mouse. We have been living, always, within a maze. The walls are constructed as institutions which direct, steer, manipulate, define and segregate us from one another.

"First we must tear down the barriers that bind us from ourselves, and then we may truly understand what it is to be human and free.

And ?

BZZZT
You seem to confused about the role of the police
1) The police do NOT "bring justice to a district"...
Instead, the police
- are part of the SYSTEM to enforce the laws of the district
- usually show up AFTER a crime is committed
- usually are used to gather evidence AFTER THE FACT
- possibly are used to track down the suspected criminal, and effect an arrest
At that point the system uses prosecutors and judge to process the alleged criminal and "bring justice" more or less..
Now the police may be tasked to keep the "public peace"
But in reality there are NOT enough police around to prevent crime or stop crime in progress.
IN actual fact, most police are not even very good at solving crime.
As a matter of fact, there is NO EVIDENCE to support the thesis that more police will result in less crime Usually more police results in a "police state" which history has shown is NOT a good thing...

More nice theories not connected to the real world Not to mention the notion that government is MAYBE the servant of the people.

That has been shown NOT to be the case in European countries, over and over again...
As a matter of fact, European governments have proven themselves repeatedly to consider themselves the Masters and NOT the servants of the people..

<BIIIIIG SIGH>
The so-called FEMA concentration camps are just another conspiracy theory.
And you'll be happy to find more of that ignorant shit all over the web

But for the sake of argument, let's suppose that this is true.
What would be, according to you, the BEST DEFENSE against such government abuse ?
A defenseless population that is easily picked up and loaded into the railroad cars ?
Or an armed population that is apt to shoot back at the government thugs coming to load them in the railroad cars ?
And remember that there are over 300 million guns in the hands of about 80 million "households" with a total of about 100 million households in the US.
There are not even close to 5 millions police and soldiers in the US

How do you think 80 million ARMED people would respond to a few million government thugs wanting to abrogate their rights ??
And don't forget that of all the people in the police and military, A VERY LARGE NUMBER are conservatives who: believe in the Constitution and what it represents BELIEVE that they have a duty to their Oath of Service, which in part states that they swear to defend the Constitution from enemies within and without the United States.
Note that their oath is NOT to uphold the government Their oath is to "PROTECT the Constitution from enemies both domestic and foreign"

Do you believe that in their minds, a government wanting to abrogate the rights of the people they swore to protect would not qualify as an enemy of the Constitution ?

> As I said, the Nazis are a dangerous bread.

Ironic how they were successful in Europe and not so successful in the US
Why do you think that is ?

Hint: Americans have a COMPLETELY DIFFERENT Mindset from Europeans which makes it difficult for such statists to do what they like to do.

> Btw- the word concentration camp is badly 'germanized' in

The so-called "FEMA camps" are conspiracy nut nonsense.
Read this http://www.popularmechanics.com/technology/military/news/4312850

And the only people who are apt to end up in it, are unarmed and trustful sheeple like you Americans are neither unarmed, nor do they blindly trust their government.

Thomas,
I hope I haven't been too harsh with you
But, I've been on these groups for a long time
It is so so frustrating to come across people who are so deeply ignorant of history both theirs and that of the US, and of the relationship between gun-control and people-control throughout history Americans learned this lesson 200+ years ago and have worked hard not to forget it Europeans, with the possible exception of the Swiss, have not leaned this lesson very well and seem to be doing everything in their power to forget it. (And sadly the Swiss seem to be going down that path as well).

You do not come across as one of the regular trolls that come through these groups to push the lies and distortions so commonly used by the gun-control crowd.
You do come across as some who is curious, not very well informed, and maybe willing to look at things from a different viewpoint.
IF you are truly interested in the subject and are willing to spend some time reading up on this subject, you will find a whole slew of people who will be happy to point to interesting material. They will also give you a fair hearing if they believe you are NOT pushing an agenda

The Occupy Wall Street crowd has become predictably focused on issues like taxing the middle class and moderately “rich,” ending capitalism and even re-electing Obama to ‘fight’ the very elites who pushed him into power. Focus should instead be on the real source of power for the out-of-control bankster class- the private, unaccountable Federal Reserve bank that creates money out of thin air, issues secret loans to insiders and foreign governments and systematically institutes debt on the American people through their undue powers.

With this in mind, Alex Jones is calling on patriots to “occupy” branches of the Federal Reserve, with plans to appear at three locations in Texas this weekend in Dallas, Houston and San Antonio. The times and locations appear below. Further, people everywhere should converge upon Fed locations in their area to raise awareness about the real culprit behind the economic crisis.

Well meaning protesters who have joined the Occupy Wall Street effort, including solidarity activities in cities everywhere, need to be educated about the power held by this insidious institution, as well as the false solutions that have been proposed by leading figures on the left and right that only further expand the scope of big government, all while avoiding the elephant in the room.

Join Alex at locations throughout Texas or begin to address the issues at the Federal Reserve branch in your location. Don’t wait for orders from headquarters– go to the sound of the guns in this information war to awaken minds and stop the massive transfer of wealth being manipulated by the very offshore interests who control the Fed and even steer the protests at Wall Street.

One of those so-called FEMA concentration camps, in the DeSoto National Forest in Mississippi, some local area people went to check it out.There isn't a concentration camp there.

During World War Two era, there were Four German Prisoner Of War Camps here in Mississippi.One of them was in Clinton,Mississippi, about five miles West of doggy's couch.

but you seem to suggest, the policemen showed up before the crime was committed (and left after).

In Germany we have a distinction between police and a sort of police for criminal investigation, called 'Kriminalpolizei'. (The ones, that collect evidence)

Police has a specific monopoly (in Germany) and that is, what gives the police a special role. Nobody is allowed to apply physical force on a person, no government, no lawyer, no military, nobody except a policemen.

They represent the enforcement power of the government and only they.
Policemen are 'Beamte'. Don't know, how to translate that.
That is the Prussian idea of organizing the state with 'Pflichten' (duties of an office'), that are codified in laws. An official is sworn in to fulfil these duties and respect the constitution and so forth.
After that, he is bound to these duties - and not to orders of the superiors. Those have duties themselves.

The American system is that of orders, that a person has to obey and only these. That is more or less a pyramid of orders. In such a system it is essential, to have control over the top position - otherwise the entire body of officials could march in unwanted directions.
The American have no clear distinction between the branches of policework, but a overlapping structure of rivalling 'agencies', like ATF, FBI, county sheriffs and so forth. And the police is organised on different levels of the USA, what leaves a confusing picture of a hierarchy of polices.

In Germany the police belong to the constitutional obligations of the
'Lï¿œnder' what is roughly the same as a state in the US.
The government (or 'Bund') has no police, because police belongs to the 'Lï¿œnder'. The Eu has no police neither - for the same reason. Actually they have some sort of policeforce, but that is highly restricted.

That is a very good way to organise policework, because government cannot easily enforce anything, what is lawless, because the policemen is not obliged to follow governmental orders (he belongs to the states) and has his duties written down. Special orders are not among those duties. Only specific persons can direct policemen, like judges, that crime-police and so forth. And the specific status as 'Beamte' makes it a crime to try to corrupt a policemen.

The entire system is, what gives Germany a peaceful appearance and usually friendly policemen. But they have more than enough power, if there is any sort of trouble, only you usually don't see it.

It is also efficient, because the police officers do a (moderately) successful job and even the 'bad' districts, like e.g. Berlin-Wedding (where I live) are quiet and relatively peaceful

That term 'European' is like 'Asian'. Did you know, we have still countries here.
In Asia there would be a HUGE distinction between e.g. India and Japan.

In Europe we have different kind of people even within a single nation.
Even Germany is more a mixture of various tribes (none called 'Germans').

So 'Europeans' is a bit too unspecific. Most probably you fall into such a category, too, since most Americans have their roots in a European country.
You should better refer to the European nations like Uk, Spain, France or Russia.

I have a lot of friends from England and they all tell me the same story. They came to Germany, because the situation in the UK is too tough. It is a very lawless and violent society.
UK is also extremely militaristic and outruns even the USA.

How did that happen?

Well, I don't know. Maybe this is a build in feature of the English society. Also the UK is highly influenced by masons and other societies, with questionable objectives.

> And we see how well that society worked as London burned this summer.

The destruction of the English society is something, that really worries me. Its closer than the USA, but more severe.
Germany is different.

Greece has a lot of problems now and there are other countries with large deficits.

> So clearly trying to keep people from having arms, doesn't necessarily > mean crimes won't occur.

I don't like the English way to control the people beyond every possible means.

Actually that wasn't my point. If you think, you need a weapon to defend yourself, than maybe thats a possible way.
I meant, that the police should provide security for the society and carrying guns around isn't necessary.

To achieve this, crimes had to reduced (on average).

Who commits a crime? Well if you are frightened, hungry and alone, but have arms, than this could lead to a crime.

All sorts of drugs are related to crimes, because the drugs allow an income. That money is 'antisocial', because it feeds the criminals and leaves wrecked bodies behind.

Greed of all sort is certainly a motivation for crimes. Sadism and perversion is also related, as is violence.

These anti-social influences should be reduced, to allow a more peaceful society to develop.

More unknown is, that dirt of various kind is also capable of making people violent. So a 'clean' environment is good for the people. Its more healthy, nicer, beautiful, if the neighbourhood isn't full of rubble.

It is really worth the afford to remove all rubble, overpaint graffiti, fix broken windows and say 'hush hush' to the drug pushers. You can kind of cure a neighbourhood this way, with moderate affords.

> The true measure isn't by how much people have had their arms removed,

Well, it depends on the arms if you end in the hospital or on the graveyard - after a crime.

The arms cause 'only' the wounds. But you are right and some investments in metal health are also necessary.

Unless the police have efficient crystal balls to foresee the future, they can ONLY show up AFTER THE FACT.

Most uniformed police at the city or county and even State level primarily perform patrol and first responder duties. Then they have their investigative branch which is responsible for building the case with the District attorneys.

Total nonsense
You have the right to use force in defense of yourself and others, if and when you consider yourself at risk of serious injury or death.
If you don't even have that, then you are the one living in a degenerate society.

That's pretty standard throughout the world
The problem has always been that every once in a while the police are turned into a personal militia of either their own leaders or some political leader. Or they are so suborned that they will not stand up and perform their duties as per their oaths

Actually, there are some very clear delineations
Granted that there is some overlap but the US is a big country, covering a LOT of space.
So there is bound to be some overlap here and there
But most of the agencies have over time worked out compromises to deal with them and even support each other when one is unable to do the job.

So what agencies deal with cross-Lï¿œnder issues ?
Who handles a criminal group that has roots in multiple Lï¿œnders

The EU is a totally different matter
In the old days you had Interpol to handle issues that straddled national borders
That's still true today.

LOL
Americans built a country where the allergic reaction was built into the national psyche. and which was STRONGLY re-inforced with the experiences of what was discovered in Europe post WWII, and then reinforced again with the Korean and Vietnam experiences .
It's why Americans tend to use the expression "Trust but Verify" when it comes to their own governments at all levels

Yes indeed
And yet THE ONLY Euro country that still believes in an armed population is the best defense against government abuse are the Swiss who have been believing that for 700+ years.
One has to wonder why the Germans haven't figured that one out. and like you still happily spout how much they are willing t blindly trust their government, even after the horrors of Germany under the Nazis..
Apparently you have neither learned the lesson, nor have you decided to eliminate the chance of it ever happening again.

I'm sure that the 6 million or so people, German and otherwise, had the same

And look what it got them..
Clearly you nor the rest of Europe learned ANYTHING from the horrors of WWII
And then you wonder why Americans tend to consider you fools and call

They call themselves "liberals", "progressives" and in many cases

At the end of the 19th Century an Englishman could buy a gun in department stores in London, no questions asked, not paperwork to fill
At the time, an Englishman was also expected to respond the the "Hue and Cry" and assist in the capture of criminals.
Since then the Brits have been slowly disarmed on law at a time, to the point that today, the National Olympic pistol team has to practice on mainland Europe because they can NOT have the pistols in England.

And while they were slowly being disarmed and made defenseless, the crime rate has steadily increased.

I'm not sure by what you mean with "the UK is extremely militaristic"
The British and a long history of military success acquired over 3+ centuries.
But British society cannot be considered "militaristic" by any sense of the word
You may be using an incorrect term.

Oh please
Germany did an self-destruct in 1939-45
Before that it did another one in 1914-1918
And a few minors ones during ten intervening period.

And right now, MOST of Europe is doing a self-destruct of it's own, which may pull Germany down with it, if the Germans don't stand up and refuse to get dragged down by countries like Greece, Spain and the rest.
Frankly if all Germans are going around like you and patting yourselves on the shoulder, while claiming to be "different", you haven't got a prayer in Hell to survive this crisis..

Nice theory
BUT TOTAL BULLSHIT
If you somehow imagine that you are immune from being the target of a random criminal attack, because you just happen to be at the wrong place and time, then you are a fool

> To achieve this, crimes had to reduced (on average).

Well that's nice
But that has NOTHING to with an individual CHOOSING to be able to protect himself, his family or even his neighbors.

It is NOT the police who are the FIRST line of defense against criminals
It's the CITIZENS
And if you're lucky, the police are not part of that criminal threat.

IN the US, there are annually about 1,500,000 crimes committed using guns ON the other hand there are about 2,500,000 DGUs (Defensive Gun Uses) where armed citizens avoid being the victims of criminals
In the US, where there are over 300 million guns in the hands of about 80 million (out of 100 million) households, there are less than 900 accidental deaths from guns.
Also in the US, armed citizens shoot more than twice as many criminals as the police do.
Yet at the same time you are 6 times more at risk from being accidentally shot by the police than an armed citizen.

I'll let you do the math...

Well that's nice AFTER the criminal has been apprehended and sent off to the hospital
But what is the target of that criminal supposed to do at the MOMENT of the crime ??
You seem to be avoiding addressing that issue.

Are you an idiot? What makes you think I have a gun to defend myself

I thought this conversation was about self defence of family, etc.. That is not a call for troops.

Some crimes are. One can do a lot to avoid crimes like not getting involved with gangs or drugs, but some trouble comes seeking you, not the other way around.

It is a sign of a

YOu have no idea what a degenerated society is so I wouldn't go around spouting about one. People in the US do not believe that they can only survive if they run around armed. In fact, only a small percentage of honest citizens do. I am one of them. I don't expect my gun to do anything to lower crime in my country. I only expect it to be available if and when I may need it.

Yes, but they aren't always there......I doubt very much you are in among police and military in your country either.

True.......and that is about 98 or 99% of the country.

There are a few.....mostly in gangs..

They do......but they also don't have the onus of providing personal security for every individual. That is also true your country.

Big difference between carrying out your troubles with a firearm and having just in case you run into one of those trying to carry out his troubles with a gun or a bomb.

Based on your posting, you have very little idea of what US laws cover and what laws we have or don't have.

This is

Anbd this is why most won't listen to you. You try to address problems, you obviously, don't understand.

The Statistics usually show that the so-called

But at least it's not a degenerated society according to you.

After all who cares about the violence just as long as people aren't carrying arms around with them.

Quite true, with all the blood Germany has on it's hands, it will be a long time before they are in a position to claim they are superior to other countries.

I will note that I gave you an example of a country that fulfills your requirements of people not being able to carry around arms....and then you tell us it's not working.

Seems your idea that you can obtain peace by controlling arms doesn't work.

It's probably a good idea to practice shooting whilst drunk, just in case you get attacked in the middle of a 3 day blinder.

USFS is on VHF-Hi, in the clear. We are too broke to afford new radios.

If you are in the middle of a 3 day blinder, having a gun with you is not really a good idea. It is like Herb Shriner once said, "They claim that alcohol and gasoline don't mix. That isn't really true. They do mix but they don't taste good together."

But "WE" were never at war in Libya, how could terrorists take shoulder missiles when we were NOT at war with Libya?

Count them again....

NATO wouldn't go and attack someone and leave thousands of missiles laying around for terrorists to use to shoot down American Commercial Jets, would they?

Obama wouldn't neglect his job as Commander in Chief to Run for Office and distance himself from a war he started and allow this kind of incompetence to run ramped in a MERCENARY ARMY that our TAX DOLLARS

The American Socialists ran the Egypt protests for a while, as they

While the Muslim brotherhood may or may not have run them out of

I have written about a peaceful appearance of Germany - as general impression.
I have not written about Germans and not about policemen.
(Actually I think the policemen are more or less the same everywhere.)

I have written about how the policework is organized and about the rights and duties policemen have. These duties are codified in laws and alike and written down. The policemen is 'Beamter', that is a special kind of employee of the state, with special duties and rights. They belong to this status for life and cannot easily be released - once they are 'Beamter'.
But its difficult to get this status and has certain benefits like relatively good pensions. So most policemen don't want to get fired (what is possible, if they do something against their duties).

Your impression of sufficient armament is in fact true. I think police has enough of what might be useful, but usually don't carry these things around.

'Germans' is a misnomer itself. Its like 'Americans'. Most citizens of the USA are not real Americans, but came from Europe, Africa or Asia. Germany is a bit similar and kind of 'melting pot', only that event of 'mixture' happened much longer ago. So you don't have a 'Typical German'. That is one of the usual mistakes of US citizens, but doesn't refer to reality.
Typical US clichï¿½s about Germans are often about typical Bavarians in reality. (Bavaria was separate a kingdom until 1871.)

But I would agree, that Germans on average are not very peaceful. But Germany is, because the police is worrying about how to defeat the criminals and not citizens with guns.

Policework seems less noisy here and policemen don't shoot often. (that is in fact extremely rare, but sometimes happen)
Even this doesn't make it less efficient, but in contrary, they do a relatively good job. The policemen might not be the best characters, but they are limited through these duties and their specific status.

Actually they have arms, only illegal. The citizens don't have, what makes them helpless victims of armed kids, that deal with drugs.

Yesterday I visited a friend from Hull in northern England and we were discussing the situation in the UK and compared that to Germany.
He said, you cannot walk around at night and cannot leave your car on the street, because you would get beaten up and the car broken or stolen.

The English have also developed hooligans, speed-drinkers and a certain kind of unmotivated violence.

This is next to disaster for a society and I fail to understand this development. It's more like situations in Poland or Russia, shortly after the collapse of communism.

Such a development is almost certainly a sign for something wrong in the structure of the society.

We compared it with Germany and his words were, that I don't know what a slum is and even the worst areas of Berlin are better, than were he came from. E.g. here you can walk alone through a park after midnight, and almost certainly get home safely. Cars are parking on the streets and only occasionally one is burned down - what the papers or tv is reporting.

To plaster the cities with cameras doesn't seem to help. Now you have pictures of the perpetrators. But want you want isn't more inmates in prisons, but less violence on the streets.

So, what went wrong?
Actually I think, it's the responsibility of masons and the specific English class system. The masons do something, besides religious service, that I don't like. They have kind of strange habits, that are not really beautiful, but almost.
Their behaviour is 'a near miss' - what looks kind of ugly to me - like these stupid aprons and white gloves. That should somehow symbolize the clothing of stonecutters (?) Well, to me it is wrong and my impression is, they do things intentionally wrong. Not significant and not important, but that adds up and could lead to such catastrophic developments.
In government everything should be done the best way possible - what the English clearly doesn't.

No one said that. Germans in general try be calm in this point. The 3rd Reich is more like a disease, that Germany 'had' - and almost 'died'.
I'm certainly not proud about this episode of our history, but on the other hand you cannot hold me responsible for that. Like killing the Indians or the atomic bomb on Hiroshima were nothing, the Americans should be proud about, but I wouldn't hold you responsible. Or the unnecessary destruction of Dresden by the British was certainly a crime.
But we're not talking about that.

This was not, what I wanted to say. I meant, that a generally more peaceful society would not require to carry around guns. The aim should be, that less crimes are committed in the first place and good, trustful and well equipped policemen take care about the criminals - and not armed citizens.

Having owned a half dozen satellite radios I'd suspect the antenna system first. Also, look for new cellular installations. 1.9 GHz mobile phones will shut down satellite radios in the vicinity.

The Thousand Year Reich was an example to the world of what happens when clever advertising men decide to whip a population into a war frenzy, using all the tools of the mass media and motivational psychology. I am sorry that it happened and I am more sorry that history tends to repeat itself among ignorant populations.

Today's fascism lite, as practiced in America, has found the perfect blend of fear and anger to sustain the corporatocracy and keep the people from asking too many questions. The internet has just made it worse.

At least you have trustworthy competitive news media. We got nothing but 24/7 propaganda. Ignorance is strength.

ARLP040 Propagation de K7RA

Sunspot excitement continues, with daily images of our Sun peppered with spots. Average daily sunspot numbers for the week were about the same as the previous week, increasing from 96.1 to 96.7. The average daily solar flux dropped from 155.5 to 132.6. Our three month moving average of sunspot numbers puts us into activity levels last seen in mid-2004.

September is over, so now let us look at our 3-month moving average of sunspot numbers. The 3-month moving averages for this year - centered on January through August (August would include numbers from July, August and September) - were 35.3, 55.7, 72.3, 74.4, 65.9, 61.5, 63 and 79.6. The jump to 79.6 is a big increase. The 3-month moving average centered on June 2004 was 80.8, which was the last time the average was near 80.

The latest NOAA/USAF forecast shows solar flux at 125 on October 7, 130 on October 8-13, 110 on October 14-16, 115 and 120 on October 17-18, and 125 on October 19-29.

The Planetary A index prediction shows 10 on October 7, 8 on October 8 and 5 on October 9-27 followed by 8 on October 28-30.

Geophysical Institute Prague predicts quiet to unsettled conditions on October 7-8, unsettled October 9-10, and quiet on October 11-13.

The monthly sunspot maximum prediction from NASA has the next sunspot maximum moving forward a month from May to April 2013, with the sunspot maximum 7 points higher. Last month, the peak was predicted to be a smoothed sunspot number of 70 in May 2013, and now the number is 77 in April 2013.

You can read it here:
http://solarscience.msfc.nasa.gov/predict.shtml.

Note that these are International Sunspot Numbers, which are much lower than the Boulder numbers reported in this bulletin.

Last week we had a report from Fred Honnold, KH7Y of Hawaii with 6 meter news. A week ago he sent this follow-up, so when he refers to Wednesday night that is September 28 and "last night" is Thursday, September 29. Fred writes: "Wednesday night worked 21 VK4s, very interesting all in the 4th district. Earlier in the evening worked LU5FF. Yesterday worked ZP5SNA, TI7/N5BEK, LU5FF, 3 PYs, no VKs or DU. Just Central and South America. I had a YV and HC call me, but no QSOs with them.

"Another very interesting QSO last night worth chatting about. I worked Peter, PP5XX that is a 12,500 km path, and within a few minutes, Peter PP5XX worked BV2DQ, long path, 20,000 km path. Not bad for 6 meters.

"I have been trying to make sense out of the JPL TEC map and my openings. Sure does not make sense and the timing seems to be much different. Like I will be in a blue area with the red area going over south America and I am still working stations. Sometimes I am under red and so it says DU and nothing. I need to read up on this!! That 20,000 km QSO between PP5XX and BV2DQ is exciting for sure."

The TEC map he refers to shows Total Electron Content of the ionosphere. You can see the real-time map at http://iono.jpl.nasa.gov//latest_rti_global.html.

Joe Flamini, W4BXG of White Hall, Virginia writes: "Worked Cardiff, Wales on 10M mobile on my way to work on the September 27. Worked Puerto Rico on 10M on my way home. Wow! 'bout time!"

Bill Tynan, W3XO of Kerrville, Texas says that Sunday, October 2 was his best day in the new solar cycle for 6 meters. He lists a bunch of calls from South America, and notes, "Although many classify all north/south propagation as TEP, I contend that much of it is F2. Certainly the HCs who are north of the geomagnetic equator are NOT TEP. On 6 meters, I run 700 W to a 50ft boom M2 at 70 ft."

TEP refers to trans-equatorial propagation.

Carl Luetzelschwab, K9LA was interviewed in a Tampa, Florida television news story about "solar storms." Carl hadn't seen it when reached in England, where he was headed to an RSGB convention, perhaps to give a presentation on propagation. Read it at http://www.abcactionnews.com/dpp/news/science_tech/fact-or-fiction%3F-the-hype-surrounding-solar-storms.

Sunspot numbers for September 29 through October 5 were 99, 89, 86, 92, 85, 126, and 100, with a mean of 96.7. 10.7 cm flux was 136.6, 138.1, 136.9, 130.9, 128.9, 130.3, and 126.7, with a mean of 132.6. Estimated planetary A indices were 15, 8, 9, 11, 6, 6, and 20, with a mean of 10.7. Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 16, 5, 12, 7, 3, 4, and 12 with a mean of 8.4.

Alcohol and gasoline mix extremely well. You need to practice under

Our society does not require it either. We have millions of people who go through their lives everyday and don't go near guns. We have others, like myself, who feel that guns are a last resort, but still wish to have that option.

The aim

That would be the case IF the police were always where they needed to be and had the onus to protect every citizen. However, they aren't and they don't. Their obligation is to society in general.

(maybe I have to stick to my position. But I would agree with you somehow.)

But think about drugs, for example.

A drug is a substance, that people like to take, because it makes them a bit relaxed, woozy or alike.

Usually the criminals don't want to make people woozy, but intend to get money from them. To avoid drug related crimes, one should try to make it harder, to gain something from selling drugs.

This could be done, if the drug itself is not the subject of prosecution or the addictive person, but drug trafficking and trade.

The addictive person had to be cured, where possible and less people should start new drug experiences. Than those, that remain addictive could be provided with the drugs in a kind of medical situation for free.

This would stop the market and leave no way to profit from addiction.

A more happy and healthy society is not so easily keen on taking drugs, because they have nicer things in mind than getting a kick.

So make people happier and healthier. Drugs only pretend to do that, but
- in fact - don't, but create a mental and personal disaster.

This all is reason for immense costs, the general public has to cover.
There are policemen to be paid and prisons, lawyers and hospitals. All this is expensive and has no greater good than a few woozy heads.

Actually I like to shoot myself, but have only an air-pistol. German laws are a bit strict and you can't easily get a gun. So I could think about the problem only from the theoretical point of view.

I think, the best way is to reduce violence in general. Criminals like to create places of their own taste. These place they like to decorate with graffiti and rubble (my impression), what scares usual citizens away.

To scare the criminals away, it is in my eyes useful, to spot such places and clean them.
I mean real physical cleaning! That allows usual people to go there again and this reduces the territory for the 'bad guys'.

This scheme is also in some way applicable on certain districts, where people live. The removed rubble attracts less criminal minds, what can 'cure' such areas.

If people carry a gun, than this would require a spotless reputation and enough training, to know about the risks. That also would require proper registration and occasional control of firearms. Actually I think, it is very dangerous, to have a gun with you outside the home. I think, the risk is higher than the benefit, but I can't tell.

No, I'm no policemen and (German) military we didn't have in West-Berlin.

Frankly, I don't see a big problem, that is free speech at its' finest ... that is what is on the guys mind and now he has warned us ... I'd say as long as everyone else can say what is on theirs', it is all good ... shame some children might have heard it though ... but, soon enough, they will anyway ...

What would piss me off is a bunch of homosexuals standing around making a large issue out of it ...

I don't think the people who would be in a position to get their hands on them would waste them needlessly ...

However, might be good to check out the fight manifests of the flights you are on, if you are flying with criminal public servants, you could be putting your life at risk ... however, this is a good time to avoid all places they frequent!

When I go fishing with the nephews/son, we go way up in the high sierra, to remote locations. There are wolfs, bears, mountain-men types (not generally dangerous, but then caution and all that), etc. and marijuana growers, etc. -- and probably dangers I have not really considered.

Now, I do carry a cell phone, but even if I call a cop on cell phone (and the phone has service), and he jumps in a helicopter immediately, I will probably already have taken care of the problem when he gets there -- in other words, the necessity of investigating my murder will, most likely, if I am successful, be totally unnecessary ...

... but hey, some WILL NEED their help ... posthumously, most likely ...

I agree.......drugs in the US should be decriminalized, sold where they can be controlled for purity and strength, taxed and those tax monies used for education and rehab.

Problem is that someone still has to pay for the drugs, process them, distribute them, etc.. That costs money... Who do you think should pay for those 'free' drugs? The taxpayer?

Depends on the drug.

I would still punish abuse of the drug. Abuse is defined as drugs being the cause of harm being brought to innocent third parties.

Much of that still has to be paid with legalized drugs. It is just that the cost of those drugs will drop and the violence associated with them will decline. Then we can take the DEA and send them out to find real jobs.

In many cases, those aren't decorations....it is gangs marking turf.

That is done, but often the result is simply that they come back and remark. In some cases, they may even inflict violence on some of those doing the cleaning so that in many neighborhoods, no one is really interested in cleaning those walls.

mmmmm.....

In most cases where someone legally carries a firearm, that is true.
Most permits to carry include a background check and some training on situational awareness, legalities and liabilities of carrying deadly physical force on your hip, and some level of proficiency with a firearm.
However, not all do. My state, for example, has no requirement for a permit to carry concealed, although I currently have one.

That also would require

The Constitution recognizes my right to keep and bear arms. It does not specify a reason to do it.

but, I think most rational men

I wouldn't care if they did or not.....if they don't like why I carry, they can try to take the gun away from me.

Liberty Net: October 1, 2011

http://3950.net/2011/10/liberty-net-october-1-2011/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

AS THE IONOSPHERIC propagation improves ï¿½ both from rising sunspot numbers and because of the change in seasons ï¿½ checking in and listening to the most intellectually exciting discussion net on amateur radio, the Liberty Net, is easier and more pleasurable than ever.

Here are some of the issues brought up this week on amateur radioï¿½s best-known discussion net:

ï¿½ With Ron Paul polling better against Obama than any other candidate, why are the billionaire-owned media almost universally failing to mention that fact? (10 minutes)

ï¿½ Except for Paul, all of the current candidates are employees of the financial elite ï¿½ and one of them, Herman Cain, was at one time a high official of the Federal Reserve System. (28 minutes)

ï¿½ The controlled media canï¿½t ignore the Occupy Wall Street protests anymore, so instead theyï¿½re purposely misrepresenting them by finding the craziest attendees and interviewing them as if they were typical. (42 minutes)

ï¿½ As more and more honest, responsible people are foreclosed upon and lose their homes, oneï¿½s ï¿½credit ratingï¿½ numbers become less and less relevant to anything in the real world. (1 hour 22 minutes)

ï¿½ Some of the Occupy Wall Street protestors know that the real problem is the fractional reserve banking system, but a large segment of them just repeat the moronic mantra ï¿½poor good; rich badï¿½ which the bankers themselves have taught them. If the ignorant prevail, the only result of the protests will be more of the same kind of incestuous ï¿½regulationï¿½ we already have ï¿½ i.e., the kind actually written by the bankers and handed out to the legislators for them to rubber-stamp in between bouts of whoring. (1 hour 48 minutes)

ï¿½ More and more people are supporting the idea of eliminating the income tax, which was illegally imposed on the American people. (2 hours 1 minute)

ï¿½ No one ï¿½ no one sane, that is ï¿½ wants to buy US treasury notes anymore. And the criminals in Congress literally salivate at the thought of getting their hands on Social Security trust funds and pension trust funds. Since they can both unload treasuries and loot the funds by forcing the funds to buy treasuries, you better believe itï¿½s going to happen. (2 hours 8 minutes)

ï¿½ Several states have introduced legislation allowing private coinage of gold and silver as alternative currencies, bypassing the bankersï¿½ counterfeit money system ï¿½ and possibly presaging secessionist movements to come. (2 hours 15 minutes)

The Liberty Net is a gathering that includes thoughtful, philosophical minds and well-informed sources every week, and any amateur operator can join in the discussion and debate. A big ï¿½thank youï¿½ to N2SAG and N2IRJ (whose feed will be the main live feed for the next few weeks) and especially W1WCR for their hard work which makes the Liberty Net ï¿½ and its Internet annexes ï¿½ possible. You can download an mp3 recording of the Net right here at http://3950.net and listen in your gym, or on your way to work, or anywhere you choose.

When I was in Miami, decades ago, bought some cuban tobacco plants and seeds. Every year I plant them in the garden and roll some killer cigars! Use some in pipes and even have a homemade razor blade "shredder" to get some fine enough for cigs.

When I run out of homebrew stuff, and have to buy a pack of cigs or tobacco, I am bummed out, I grow a much superior product!

Tobacco is all in the curing, and the "curing juice" you apply (usually a "secret" of tobacco growers/manufacturers ...

Decades ago, the knowledge was hard to come across on how to properly grow and cure tobacco. Today, on the internet, you can obtain it for free.

Basically, since I save seed to grow my own tobacco, my only cost is papers and cigarette tubes ... maybe 20 to 40 bucks a month for both the wife and me ... I love tobacco growing, it is a neat hobby to get into! The plants are enormous, except for leaf shape, the rows in the moonlight mimic rows of corn ...

These days, I grow all my tobacco needs and keep two sisters in tobacco for homemade cigs. (They like to smoke factory made when they go out, so does the wife, they think roll-your-own is just too 'okie') -- I like it when people see me rolling cigs out of a light leather pouch and start asking me questions about it ... I always am attempting to encourage others to do the same -- grow their own and "get off the grid!"

If I still drank, I'd homebrew my beer, if I smoked dope, I'd grow that too ...

What we need is to legalize pot and have some classes in how to grow and process your own ... I don't want to pay for something for someone that they can do cheaply for themselves. If you can grow house plants and/or a garden, you should have no problem with weed ... after all, hemp is a common weed in some parts of the USA ...

God gave marijuana to man, men didn't ... so they damn well have no right to take it away ... I mean get real, it is insane to try to make any plant illegal! Not that there is a shortage of insane people, we seem to have an abundant supply ...

Alcohol is a drug in a way and cigarettes make quite addictive, but that was not, what I meant with illegal drugs.
I mean stuff like crack or heroine. These create a certain kind of physical addiction, that is very hard to cure and forces the addictive person to use these substances, unless they want to get severe pain and health problems.

Like any substance, the price depends. It is a question of the way, these substances are produced and not of the stuff itself. In Afghanistan a great deal of the raw material is produced. This could be bought there for relatively moderate prices. The processing to a drug is usual chemical work, that any good pharmaceutical plant could do.

So the single dose could be provided for very low costs - in case the government would provide this. It should - of course - be limited to real addictive people and in fact for free, because the objective of such activity is not, to help people to a woozy head, but to dry out the market for such substances.

The Dutch way of selling pot in cafï¿½s is in my eyes silly and not really helpful. Mariuana is not as harmless as many people think. It is from my impression very psychoactive and could create severe mental problems.

In areas of So. America, Coca Leaf is legal. I think the wife and I were on a train in Bolivia when we had our first cup of coca tea -- delightful stuff! As good or better than coffee, indeed a mix of coca leaf with coffee beans is an ideal pick-me-up!

Coca tea should certainly be available here in the USA ... and, like pot, the government should keep their noses out of others business and what plants they consume ... if you are in public and endangering yourself or others, different story ... if you are committing a crime, different story, etc.

It was an insane plan to ever attempt to outlaw God given plants. I don't know what insanity ever made it seem different, what thinking made us wish to punish people for using plants, etc. ... but someday we will have to return to sanity and tell the control freaks to mind their own business and quit locking up people for using plants and committing no other crime(s.) For one thing, we simply can't afford it, never could, really ...

That's not the business Apple is in; they sell a lifestyle of form of substance.

Besides, Apple was extant in the market before PC's (the original Apple computer was something like $3000, a clone was about $2300, IIRC). Apple maintained a following and indeed an increasing market base even after PC's got so cheap that most anyone could afford one.

If someone likes a product enough to pay what seems to be an exhorbitant price for it, even in the face of a much cheaper alternative, then that is what they call "market forces" in operation. The consumer, in this case, has actually set the price by buying the product. If nobody were buying it, it would either become cheaper or taken off the market.

FYI I owe my life to an old Apple][+ because I learned machine language programming on one of those and then through a series of events ended up being a full time programmer for IBM personal computers that got to travel all over the place like from Boston, MA to Orlando, FL via New York City were I went to the top of the South Tower. And I went to places like San Francisco, Los Angeles, Catalina Island, Amarillo, TX even up to Vancouver Canada and a lot of other places in the mid states.

Two of the things I did on the Apple][e computers while I was still in school were to rewrite the OS so it could load the first two programs on a disk without loading the entire OS depending on what number I pressed while booting and I changed my OS so I no longer had to spell out the entire word CATALOG. All I had to do was spell cat or catwhatever (meaning as long at the word "cat" was spelled in upper or lower case it didn't matter what letters were behind it).

Yep, I owe my life to Steve Jobs even though I never bought an iPhone, iPad or iPod but I might buy an iPhone if Sprint will let me keep my current plan with unlimited phone as modem.

They subsidised and strongarmed their way into schools; a whole generation equated Apple with computing. It's definitely a fashion thing.
I was the IT guy at a TV network west coast headquarters. All the "creative" types insisted on iMacs; they refused to work on windows machines (this is for typing-not editing). Hollywood creative types are insufferable boors.

I have at least half a dozen old Apple and Mac computers, and a bunch of old Windows computers.Some of them are Portable Computers, forerunners of laptop computers, one of them has a big shoulder strap attached to it.Five of my old Dinasaurs (computers) were given to me for free.The rest of them, I bought dirt cheap at Goodwill.My newest computer, a Velocity Micro ProMagix desktop computer XP Home Edition operating system, I bought it new from Velocity Micro in Richmond,Virginia in November of 2004.I have seven WebTV set top boxes.For most of what I do, WebTV works just fine for me.

The government is not responsible for your daily kicks.
What I have written is a (possible) way to reduce drug-related crimes.

These crimes and the addictive people produce enormous costs for the general public, because the police has to be behind them, they occupy prison cells and beds in hospitals. They do not really work, and if they do something, than mostly illegal stuff.

Besides the health risk (Aids for example) and the dangers of crimes, the costs are also worth to mention.

To reduce these costs, the policy about drugs could be changed. Than taking the drug isn't wanted, but not a crime. Only drug-trade is prosecuted.

And to dry out the market, the drugs are handed out for free, but only to the real addictive people and only in special centres. This will not allow any profit - or at least much less - from drug trading.

If the addictive person gets his daily dose, the related crimes could be greatly reduced. This alone would be a justification. But there is more, since the income from drugs are often used to finance other unwanted activities. (All the third-world guerillas for example live more or less from drugs.)

Anyhow: things like this will not happen, because positive effects for you are negative effects for other people, that are not really happy about loosing their income.

When my eight years older brother was an MP at Fort Gordon,Georgia back in the 1950s, a guy was driving a Jeep.That guy had forgot to first check the oil level.He burnt the Jeep engine up.My brother and another guy, they went out there with some old used motor oil.They drained the new oil from the Jeep, then they refilled the Jeep engine with the old used motor oil.When they got back to Motor Pool, the boss said, I can't understand why that engine burned up.

T'aint no tellin what you might find in those thrift stores out there.

How about a 1957 Grundig AM/FM/Shortwave/Phonograph floor model wooden cabinet radio? How about a 1960s Telefunken Opus AM/FM'Shortwave wooden cabinet table top radio? Both of them were made in Germany.

I bought those radios at the Goodwill store that used to be on Palmyra Street in down town Jackson,Missy Sippy.I paid $14.00 (Fourteen Dollars) for my Grundig radio, I paid $4.00 (Four Dollars) for my Telefunken Opus radio.Both of those radios I bought on the same day at that Goodwill store.I reckon I have over 300 (over Three Hundred) old radios I bought at the thrift stores around here.A few old collectible TV sets too.

Perhaps this genius can also explain why more and more college students in science and engineering are switching to Macs? Of their own free will, that is. And not to use Windoze on them, either.

What is Apple at now - 11%, third largest, up from less than 5% four years ago?

Interesting; from 5 kW day/3 kW night to 35kW unlimited. But I don't

Somewhere at some time many years ago;
I heard that most US Made Cigarettes were 20%~30% Cabbage; and that the stuff that they 'treat' the Tobacco with in Cigarettes to keep them burning is the real cause of the Lung Cancers many Smokers get after years of Smoking.

You cannot do that, because alcohol is in the end a cheap chemical, that anybody could easily produce at home.

Crack is different and the kind of addiction is. This is, what makes these substances so dangerous. Than crack is relatively expensive, hence of much greater interest for criminals, because the profit rate is enormously high. Only the business is very risky and one dealing with drugs could easily end up in a prison (or worse).

To reduce the profit rate, the drug had to be cheaper, but less available. This could only be achieved, if the substances are handed out for free (or low price) in controlled situations.
This would modify the 'terms of trade', because the real addictive people are then off the streets.

Alcohol is more a health problem for the individual, than a great deal for the criminals. So alcoholism needs other means to to cure it.

> So to "Dry-Out" the Tobacco Market We Should > Give It Away for Free Too !

You insist on this 'for free', but I don't. Actually a moderate (low) price would have the same effect and would possibly look less dubious.

Tobacco is a risk for the health, too, but to smoke is an individual decision and not such a problem for the society in general.

The addictive people do a lot of illegal things, like breaking into homes, stealing cars, robbery and alike, to finance their addiction. So these drug dealer profit in the end from these crimes.

The question for me was, how to reduce crime and not how to reduce the individual costs for 'kicks'.

Well, I definently don't like the "high" of marijuana, but coca is so much like coffee as a pick me up that I can see real value in it ... indeed, I believe coca-cola used to actually contain cocaine ...

It wasn't until this century began that drugs were illegal ... I can remember that my grandmother still had supplies of opium and cocaine and guarded them religiously ... doling them out for a toothache here, someones insomnia here, etc.

The original argument, why to make drugs illegal, was basically that people were duped into becoming addicted and supporting the "medicine show man" selling his "tonics."

Well, times have a changed, everyone knows about drugs ... we can decriminalize them now ... the only people who will become addicted are those who wish to ... no one is going to be duped into it ...

Well, I will agree with you, tobacco is very addictive, I really don't care, I don't want to quit. My doctor has already offered me various "therapy's", tranquilizers, etc. to quit smoking -- truth is, I don't want to quit ... but if and when I do, I won't even think twice about asking him for help ... my doctor is near 65, doesn't smoke and thinks the dangers of tobacco are greatly over-blown ... but, NOT TOTALLY WITHOUT RISK ... he always starts out, "The law requires me to tell you this ..."

But, for right now, I am going to step out on the porch and blow off a great cigar ...

Actually, untrue ... in countries where the drugs are "legal" you find lawyers, doctors, judges, bankers, etc. which die of old age and are addicted to such drugs as opiates ...

The real danger is the high cost of drugs and the difficulty obtaining them, that is why people are murdered in holdups, home burglaries, etc.

Give 'em the drugs and let them go crash in a flop house ...

Pick up any newspaper, pay close attention to the specifics of most killings ... you will find that the majority revolve around the illegality of drugs and someone committing a crime to get the drugs ...

Crack, methamphetamine and highly refined cocaine have removed people from my life ... I believe that these drugs are highly dangerous.
However, some people do seem to be able to use them for recreation with few dangerous repercussions, or even none at all ... some it kills quickly.

The worst thing I have noticed about methamphetamine (or crack) is that people go crazy from lack of sleep, poor nutrition, etc. I would strongly caution people NOT to consume these drugs, as in most cases where friends or people I have known about have taken these drugs, to excess, it has killed them, left them in mental wards, destroyed their health, etc.

Still, I would not have people punished for using these drugs -- they do enough harm to themselves, why would I want to abuse them further ... however, any crimes they commit should be prosecuted ... if people are going to commit suicide, and they can't get drugs to do it with, they will find another way ...

Excellent audio demonstrations of why drugs, alcohol and/or crazy people people, don't mix well ... thanks.

Reminds me of that old Cheech and Chong movie where they are smuggling dope into the USA by forming the compressed pot into the material the auto body is made out of ... maybe dave is indicating you break off parts of a MAC and smoke it?

I don't know, I'll wait until others have tried it and see if it looks like something I would like to do, or not ...

One thing to remember about all drugs of this nature is how much it was adulterated and with what.

That is an unknown. Hence the regular occurrences of overdoses, and the effects of toxins and chemicals which shouldn't even be in a drug.

What's been mixed in may be more of a danger than the drug itself.

Just saying.

One does have to wonder what the impact of a controlled pharmaceutical grade form of these drugs would have vs the "bathroom gin" that's currently in supply.

They virtually gave them the hardware, then sold them the software for exorbitant prices ... signed them into exploitative contracts, etc.

Contracts which stipulated only apple people maintained the college hardware ... etc., etc. Games within games, really.

Back in the late 80's and early 90's I taught at a jr. college, I seen first hand how apples predatory sales techniques worked.

Finally, at the college, a few of us wrote letters of complaint to the "higher ups" and rectified the problem ... there was also some business of "incentives" being passed about about by apple to those who controlled purchasing ... lunches, wining and dining, etc. However, digital equipment corporation also participated in such practices ... (DEC)

However, one thing I did notice, the "apple room" was always full of liberal arts students while the PC sections of the computer labs always contained the math, physics, science, etc. students ... just as a casual observation ...

Could have some relationship to the accelerated "dumbing down" of schools and students which has been underway for decades ... no motivation or interest in building their own computers or maintaining up-to-date and state-of-the-art equip. for advanced use ... just want canned hardware ... just sayin' ...

Wow, learned motorola syntax to write in intel assembly syntax ... kinda like exchanging the horses place with the cart ...

In the early days, getting documentation on the apple bios was so difficult, it was probably the major reason most jumped to intel to write OS, apps, etc.

And, so long ago I forget the specifics, but at least a lot of the apple bios was boot blocks on a disk, as opposed to the firmware bios of the PC ...

Whenever the slaves wanna' start an uprising, the powers which be realize that if they fill their hands with busy work, they are much more likely to be able to quell the revolution ... I guess they figure abusing addicts is so much fun it will keep their minds off the lack of jobs, low pay, lost benefits, potholes in the roads, inflation, etc.

Who knows? Morons do seem to be easily entertained ...

I know one thing, if you roll a cig with homegrown tobacco, it WON'T sit there and burn up like a store bought one, you quit puffing on a homemade and it ceases burning.

Someone, forgot who, told me they treat commercial tobacco with potassium nitrate, to make it burn like that ... nitrates have been known to cause cancer ... but krist, inhaling all the smoke in your lungs, no matter what, can't be like breathing mountain air ... and if you have asthma or other conditions, can't be good ...

But, hey, people die skydiving, mountain climbing, scuba diving, skiing, driving race cars, playing sports, eating junk foods, etc. ... if you enjoy it, do it ... screw the government!

Really? And they signed these contracts with the children? Because I was Then they were free not to sign them, weren't they? Ergo: not

Or it could be what I've observed year after year: someone who switches

You should have seen my mother with a PC, virus after virus, email sending spam to everyone in her address book, etc. Still, she would never take a computer class, never would read a book, ...

The world breathed a sigh of relief when we insisted she have a MAC and took away her PC ... it was then I realized PC's are like guns ... some people just shouldn't be allowed to own one!

She now plays solitaire, emails and watches netflix without doing harm to anyone else ...

Your post is an excellent example of what I have found about "Apple People", they have a religious devotion to the platform ...

Personally, the only reason I use a PC, and refuse MAC's, is that I write much of the software I use ... plus, I private contract to develop software on multiple platforms (even though I am retired, for the most part) ... while most of that could be done on a MAC, it simply would not make economic sense, for me ... I mean, I am in the business to make money -- NOT pay money to apple ... apple has worked hard in being one of the most proprietary corps I have ever seen, I think they can do that without me ...

Yes they were different but the closest thing to Intel machine language was machine language. Besides the assembler I had at the time could be used for multiple languages and we had to learn a few of them too.

> In the early days, getting documentation on the apple bios was so

I had just the opposite problem. I found it was easier to get documentation the Apple Dos and Apple BIOS than it was for me to get it for the IBM AT. And when I finally found and bought my IBM AT Technical Reference Manual I ended up with a used copy instead of a brand new one.

> And, so long ago I forget the specifics, but at least a lot of the apple

Yep, I remember the way Apple booted very well and I never figured out how to boot trace on an IBM the way I could with the Apple.

As a matter of fact that fast loader I wrote for the Apple DOS that could run programs without loading the entire OS was placed into the sector that was used to assemble the data read from the disk.

That reminds me. I also sped up how quick I could read from text files from a disk because on a read I removed the built in time-out and just read from the disk until I didn't get an error.

I even wrote a special OS just to handle Rayna drives that supported 80 tracks and then used that on my BBS. Oh boy, talking about my Apple BBS now. I even rewrote the machine language part of the modem interface to be interrupt driven and after I did that the user could no longer tell when it was changing modules because it would change modules while it was still sending characters out of a buffer via interrupts.

Tobacco and Alcohol Addicts live normal lives

In what way is the Mac more "proprietary" than Windows from your perspective? The fact that they've always sold computers with their own OS? You can write software for that platform just as you can for Windows or for Linux.

Have you also considered economics? Macs ain't cheap...and once people have all that Mac money invested, they might be reluctant to change.

I had my first Apple II back in 1981. Loved it! Then along came the Mac -- closed architecture, NO expansion slots.

IBM PCs then came on the scene with -- whadda ya know -- open architecture and expansion slots, an idea that Apple abandoned and IBM adopted.

To this very day, IBM has TONS more ham radio, astronomy and science software, expansion cards and applications than the Mac.

If you like a toaster/appliance, the Mac is just fine.

I had to use a Mac as a desktop system for two years when I worked for Terry Mathews. Worst experience of my life, using a Mac. I had to use the modified desktop reset device too often to ever want to purchase a Mac. The modified desktop reset device was a paper clip.

PC's are much better bargain than the Mac.

All one needs to do is study up on prohibition and it's resuls.
Alcoholims actually went up over time during prohibition Crime increased
Graft and corruption increased
And people just kept on drinking

That is true. Of course the companies making them are making couch business again.

First I've heard of that. I get email from HP at least twice a month wanting me to upgrade my laptop. Also, the PX sells almost nothing BUT HP computers.

Not for decades - forever. Each generation is dumber, has poorer values, and is in every way worse than the previous generation - as defined by the previous generation. Everything good peaked at the previous generation after millennia of improvement, but is now going down hill.

For any value of "now" that you wish to use getting its previous generation to make the valuation.

Any substance is somehow a drug. So let's talk about narcotics - maybe.

If you consider all the suffering related to these drugs: mental and health problems, loosing jobs, families and friends, a LOT of money and possibly life. So warnings should be there. But it's not really a question of the law and criminal investigation, if someone is taking these substances.

On the other hand, this is not wanted neither, because consume has negative side effects. But making this stuff illegal and consume a crime makes matters much worse, since the addiction cannot be properly treated, the stuff is mixed with any kind of toxins and the price for the dose is getting very high, what inevitable leads to related crimes.

This is all a great big ugly mess. Most countries do not really solve these problems, but have half-baked programs, that can make matters even worse.

So people should start to think it over and calculate the benefits against the costs and find a possible solution.

A solution would be a cure of addiction. Sounds like a silly proposal, but there are certain therapies, that seem to work and are seldom used:

One way stems from Israel and that was to sedate the addictive person during the detoxification.
Another way use a specific drug, but I forgot the name. It was kind of hallucinogen plant from Westafrica.

The substitution with methadone seems to create more problems than it solves, what leave the controlled hand out of the real drug.

Well, ...

I simply think of it as empowering people, allowing them free access to their God given rights and resources ... God gave them free will, I don't need to override his decision.

I would always support help for "fallen people", people who have made mistakes ... get them away from their addiction and back into self sufficiency ... I mean, I'd do no less for an animal who got itself in "a bad situation", to do any less for a human would declare myself subhuman, IMHO ...

Like I say, I have a strong respect for the creator given rights and resources referenced by the forefathers ... it would simply be un-American to not support them with my very life ...

And, I think the 10 commandments have it all covered nicely, if they aren't breaking them, they are not offending me or society ... and frankly, there are still areas there where I have no business sticking my nose into -- I mean, if they are disrespecting their parents, they and their parents will have to settle that out ...

Yep, pretty much my thinking and observations.

I think we would have a lot more empty prisons, if only back in the early 1900's we had made Coca-Cola put a warning on their bottles, rather than start locking up the people for drinking it -- passing expensive and punitive laws, etc!

I am one who thinks your point(s) is/are absolutely correct. The USA government is in the drug trade here and imprisons all their competition ... surely gives a most severe definition to "monopoly!"

I can't believe people actually want to waste their tax dollars on support the crooks! If fact, I think the government lies and most don't want to!

Well, just pass out alcohol and drugs, and a transmitter, at a local nut house, someone would step forward and give such an audio demonstration in short order ...

Kinda funny, at first, grows old quick ...

Well, an example of that might be my own childhood, and that "past generation."

Eighty-percent of the people owned their own homes, twenty-percent were buying (mortgages, renting, etc.) -- today that is totally upside down and an excellent indication of the trouble we are in ...

Linux is surely the equal, or better, of windows -- however, it is a tad bit more difficult to use (unbutu perhaps breaks that rule) and is just as prone to viruses and such, if used by people without proper education and/or a virus/malware scanner ...

Plus, when you give people a product with is dirt free, they just can never really trust it, they have to suffer payment or they just have "that uncomfortable feeling." ROFLOL

I bought an HP which case was made from the same material as the Glock handgun ... tough stuff ...

However, that was the only good part of the whole laptop! I'll bet if you went and dug up that case, in the landfill, it would still be usable! Even after the cat/bulldozer dove over it! lol

Since my first language was actually hex and firmware programming, assembly actually looked "high level" to me ... but, although I resisted, my life is pledged to the C++ god and his scriptures created in C syntax ... if you are ever tempted or forced to use assembly, for some weird and new hardware, you can always use the inline function in most C compilers and just drop to assembly and keep on writing ... but, my C compiler will compile straight assembly, if directed to do so ... the world has gotten gray ... and me too!

Yep, when I first got my new doctor, a few years back, he asked me if I smoked, I replied yes (what the hell, you know he already smelled it on me!) He said, "You know, that is going to kill you, don't you?" I replied, "I will be the first in my family, and they all smoked." That is when he pointed out that he had to tell me that, the government and the AMA required it ...

But, I do believe smoking does harm to the lungs, and certainly, if you have emphysema, asthma, prone to pneumonia, etc. -- DON'T FOOKING SMOKE!!! -- it is like, DUH!

So?

Apple's suddenly an evil empire because they make hardware and Microsoft

I really should follow my own advice, Quit Smoking!
I did quit smoking in 1972, for seventeen years.I was driving a Sunbeam bread truck, (Don't Say Bread, Say Sunbeam!) I had smoked three of the cigs in my pack of Kool menthol cigarettes.I threw the rest of that pack of cigs away.Seventeen years later, I lit up a Pall Mall cig and I was smoking again.

I first started smoking in 1964 at Tan Son Nhut,Vietnam when I bummed a Philip Morris cig from a guy.The next day I went to the PX store and bought a pack of Philip Morris cigs.I was Hooked.

Actually, you have missed the point, gotten off track, the conversation
I seen was focused on fools and overpaying for the same bang less buck will do ...

It isn't that apple is evil for taking fools money, the fools always end up giving it to some one ... nor are the fools evil ... evil just doesn't really apply.

If fools willingly give you money, I am not aware of any crimes which have been broken, nor evil criminals at fault ... I mean, like, DUH!

I strongly suspect you lie, and they don't ...

However, I would be quick to believe they get paid to let a hardware manufacture slap the microsoft name/logo on a stupid mouse, which could be bought cheaper, if it didn't bear the microsoft name and logo ...

Been there done that meaning I used the inline function plenty of times until windoze came along because it didn't seem to like any assembly code at all.

I did a lot of C programming as a matter of fact I did too much of it because when it came time to access to a database I had force myself to use C++ because Microsoft would not let you access their database functions with C. What I ended up doing was learning how to call a C++ module from a C module and that sure made life easy.

I ended up in the MSDN where I got all sorts of Microsoft Compilers and languages so that was pretty neat but I got out of that before they ever had a decent copy of XP. Turns out I found a way to use my MSDN license keys with XP SP3. All I had to do was change one text file before I installed it.

To this day I am still running WINDOWS Server 2000 on a few of my computers.
I know one of them caught a virus or five so I don't turn that one on much anymore. I had it scanned and it found 4 viruses but it still runs like it has a virus in it so one of these days I hope I can reinstall the OS without loosing too much.

Oh and I still use WINDOWS 2000 Server when I want a web server but now I mostly use it under Microsoft Virtual PC 2005.

In the end, all I see left on the table, once the BS is wiped up, is control freaks and crooks ...

Or, simply, those who do not get a reward from controlling others, or are making no profit from drugs being illegal, simply have no interest in consuming billion or even trillions of tax payer dollars to imprison, otherwise, law abiding citizens ...

Unless some other crime is committed, the simple act of consuming a drug (or narcotic, specifically) is simply a victimless crime ... and certainly NOT WORTH PAYING $40,000+ USD to punish someone for (lock them in a prison) ... besides, it only ends up, really, punishing the tax payers and society at large ... but, if you are not making any money off of the drugs themselves, exploiting the American tax payer for your paycheck is yet another option (paid public servant, policing authority, court employee, etc.)

All of this punishment, criminalization and illegality of drugs does is "put fleas on the tax payers back", to suck 'em dry ...

JS

They made mice for a long time.....whether or not they still do, I honestly don't know. It wass their only piece of hardware.

Except that some of them are not entirely correct.

I'll agree that Apple's hardware isn't cheap in comparison to Windows-based PCs, but you're getting a fast, stable OS that is pretty much tailored to run on the hardware - and while the hardware uses much the same componentry as you'll find in any x64-based PC, the hardware has been designed to be supportive of the OS, not the other way around. This leads to a longer useful life of the hardware even once it's been relegated to a secondary post-replacement role.

Apple has not abandoned the open architecture idea: it lives on in the desktop machines outside of the iMac range. Last time I opened mine up, there were slots. Lots of them, and compatible with various flavours of PCI, SATA, and other standard architectures, as it happens. Yes, iMacs are sealed units (effectively, though there are still upgrades that can be performed on them), but so are the all-in-one PCs from major manufacturers such as Dell.

As for the Windows platform having more software available for any purpose (not just the ones mentioned): well, yeah. It does. But how many variations on a theme are actually useful? I can't think of a time where it's been better to have multiple software packages installed that all do about the same thing rather than one that just does it well.

Also note that OS X can build and run a large chunk of the software available for *nix systems as well (see: Macports, Darwinports, Homebrew, and other port managers), so tools and applications already in use on other platforms can typically be installed and used on a Mac. End result: more software choice.

Please don't take away from this that I'm a Mac zealot (I'm really a UNIX bigot) - it's just tedious to hear the same things said about the platform over and over that aren't factually-accurate.

So is renting an example of a generation being dumber?

They choose to rent instead of buy because they are dumb?

Or is it they are dumb enough to create the economy where it made more sense to rent than to buy?

You confuse "stable" with being "limited like a child."

You simply can' screw up a MAC like you can a PC because it doesn't allow it ... the PC comes, out of the box, WIDE OPEN!

Windows 7 is full of a bunch of nag screens now, asking for rights to install a driver, right to install software, rights to make changes to the registry, etc. ... but morons still don't know what this means and allows it.

Truth is, unless you tell a PC to allow a virus/malware, it is NOT going to do it and is just at "stable" (your words) as a MAC. This assuming you have allowed microsoft to automatically update drivers, software and malware/virus protection -- things which the MAC does without ever giving you opportunity to ignore/stop/refuse ...

You definition of "stable" means, to me, "stopping morons from compromising their systems."

As I say, PC don't have a "mommy and daddy" protecting you, you will get asked a simple question, about allowing the changes ... if you really don't understand the changes you are allowing, you might not wanna' allow them ...

Basically, linux/UNIX and mainframes are the same, totally open ... I can't count the linux machines I have seen compromised which the owners are telling me "linux doesn't get viruses like windows", and, basically, they are correct -- IT IS THEM WHO HAVE ALLOWED IT!

And, of course, on a main frame you have a system administrator protecting you and making decisions for you, and his/her FIRST decision will be to NOT ALLOW YOU TO MAKE CHANGES ... roflol

On a PC, you are GOD ... pure and simple, with the power of GOD comes great responsibility ... makes sure you have the wisdom to be a GOD before proceeding ... GODS don't make mistakes, yanno'? <grin>

JS

Actually Microsoft does make hardware. Mice, keyboards, headsets, webcams, and even fingerprint readers.

True they don't build systems, but they do produce certain types of hardware. They even patent certain aspects of that hardware. Such as the tilt wheel mouse.

Hell, back in 2008, they received a patent for the page up and page down keys. (Patent #7,415,666)

Back then I was dealing with Sun's mostly because we were developing VLAN systems. You could cram a bunch of Quad Ethernet Controllers into a Sun pizza box and generate quite a bit of on-demand traffic.

I don't buy individual server systems anymore. It is all clusters and such. Roll the rack(s) in plug in the power, network and start configuring your VMs and storage.

Most of our data centers do not see a human body for days on end. Usually it is to commission or decommission equipment.

You get what you pay for. When it is free that is exactly what you get, free software.

We tend to go with Red Hat ES and SUSE Linux. These have proved to be the most stable and most apps are supported on them.

I have just gone through migrating a class of applications from Solaris (SPARC) to Windows. The rational is that there was no need to have your "highly educated" workforce supporting the applications on UNIX/Linux when they can be supported by just about anyone on a Windows system.
And, since they are on Windows they easily run in a VM. The cost went from about $25,000 a year to about $300 for the systems. The run support is expected to be about $2,500 for the partial off-shore Windows head.

Well, red hat and suse have what some don't, proprietary hype and cutsy GUI tools and implement their own "methods of doing things" ... the most

"honest linux", which stays true to form, the most, to the old UNIX, is slackware ... simply pick the GUI interface you want to use with it, or are most comfortable with ... coming from times before the "GREAT GUI GOD", and related/associated "biblical scriptures in 'GUI syntax'", I use a command line as much as possible ... but then, up until vista, I knew how to turn off the windows gui and go mainly commandline (almost like a 32-bit "super dos!") ... the gui just got too tough to fight ... I now use the Great GUI Gods tools ...

I could care less about keeping to "honest Linux" I have applications that a world wide engineering organizations rely upon 24/7/365. I want up time.

I used to be a command-line die-hard like you but, I have people who write code and do all of the nitty-gritty technical stuff and I really don't care if you use ed or vi to edit your files.

Nope. Please tell me where I made that comparison; it's all yours.

Disagreed. The threat models are different, but I will concede that OS X' security track record has generally been better than Windows', even taking into account that there have been four major versions of Windows released in parallel with the history of OS X.

Big deal; it's the same on any *nix-based OS (and I'm including OS X in that for the sake of the argument). Let an idiot allow malware to do something in God Mode and it's just as bad on any platform.

Wrong. There have been plenty of system-level vulnerabilities in Windows that have allowed exactly the kinds of scenarios you're proposing here take place without user intervention.

Also, don't confuse 'security' with 'stability'. Two different things, though one may occasionally depend on the other.

Automatic Updates usually address the worm o' the week after the fact. That's not to say that they're never proactive about problems, but usually the patch comes in for the major problem after it's hit CNN.

By the way, you can refuse updates on the Mac (which incidentally is not an acronym, so no need to wear out the caps lock key typing it in block capitals). You may not know how to do that, but your ignorance of the OS X GUI does not mean that your assertion is in any way, shape, or form correct. Again.

I don't believe that I ever provided you with my definition of stability in this context beyond the BSOD, so you're making an assumption there again. Nice try, though.

you want to be an effective troll, learn to troll effectively.

Now, giving you the benefit of the doubt, you may just be speaking from a position of complete ignorance. And that's OK; the world evidently needs dumb people too, though I've personally found them substantially less than necessary. However, I would have expected someone capable of manually poking hex values into memory to be a little more... Savvy.

You clearly have no idea of the difference between a worm, a virus, a trojan, or an application- or system-level vulnerability. I'll leave configuration (either at the system or application level) out of this for now, because I wouldn't want to confuse you any further.

Really, you need to up your game. I'll give you a half-check mark for

Of course you do, and there's no such thing as the 'administrator'

If Linux is "surely the equal, or better, of Windows", then Mac OS X is surely the superior of Windows, because it is surely the better of Linux.

It offers all that Linux offers and is easier to use.

There's a lot you don't know. Hardly anybody owns a home. And when the bank owns more than the house is worth, or when a job comes up and they can't sell their home to move, they wish they had rented.
I am holding off downsizing until housing values go up.

I am also subsidizing other homeowners because they have tax breaks renters don't get. (and they are subsidizing me for the same thing).

It is always good to examine closely held beliefs. You don't seem to be willing to do so.

Yep, saw that a couple of days ago. Not that it would be impossible to do this on a *nix system, but could you point me to a link that names the OS that was infected? So far I haven't seen anything that names it one way or another.

St. Agnes says,
"Divine Love always has a Great Purpose, and when It shows, It shows with a glow beyond what the human mentality can picture It. Divine Love is a Love not truly, fully understood by the human mentalities of human lives, but Divine Love has a Strength in It, a Hope in It, and a Goal for It."

REVELATION DELIVERED THROUGH FRANCES M. KLUG
ON SEPTEMBER 3,2003 AT 1:25 P.M.

SAINT AGNES

“I am Saint Agnes.

I have not spoken often through this Gift that is so Precious to the lives and for the lives of millions of human beings, who live in a world where there is much chaos and much misinterpretation on what is morally sound, correct, right, over what is evil, even in a small degree, and few words.

Today is a happy day for Me, because when I hear so Many of the Heavenly Ones speak through this Gift of The Father’s Love, it gives All of Us Here in the Heavens a joy unbelievable to the human mind.

Divine Love always has a Great Purpose, and when It shows, It shows with a glow beyond what the human mentality can picture It. Divine Love is a Love not truly, fully understood by the human mentalities of human lives, but Divine Love has a Strength in It, a Hope in It, and a Goal for It.

Human beings of all ages like to speak the word ‘love’, especially when it is connected to an individual or situation they are close to. ‘Divine Love’ is everywhere, and It is evident everywhere. The only thing that does not show are the people who innately believe in It, thus making their mentality one that they are content with, happy with, sincere about, and It gives them a strength for many things they partake in.

I will close My Words, because I could speak hours on the importance of what it means to All of Us Saints Here in the Heavens to see this Gift of The Father’s Love being spread in many ways, but also His allowing the Saints to add Words of Encouragement, thus giving to others the reality that Sainthood is the Goal for human life.”

Key loggers are not really a virus and/or malicious app ... depends on who is viewing them. The parents which place one on the family computer and/or childs' computer, or the child which uses the computer ... the husband spying on the wife, or the wife, the wife spying on the husband, or the husband ... the company "monitoring its' assets" or the employees being monitored ... etc.

I am sure when our country introduces such code into a foreign nations systems, it is simply a "matter of national security", roflol!

Security, much like beauty, is in the eye of the beholder ...

The guy under the bridge, he doesn't own a home ... I know that ... if he wants one, if he thinks he needs one ... I just don't know ... but, I could guess ...

The rest of what you had to say, bad decisions, paying too much for a home, etc. ... well ya', that is covered in "Life 101." If you missed that class, problems will keep arising until you do take that class! ... don't make those bad decisions, don't pay too much for over valued property, don't buy what you can't afford, etc.

Basically, it comes down to common sense, if you can't afford the house, don't buy it... yet ...

If you are having problems, you will have to examine how you have been doing things, and change them -- doing what you have just done, and failing, but expecting a different result THIS TIME is just plain insanity!

If in a dead end job, get out of it. If in a low paying field, leave it. If you suffer a lack of skills, get them ... the crooks in government can be blamed for a LOT of stuff -- letting valuable jobs go overseas, stealing wealth from citizens, graft, corruption, printing worthless money, etc. But, you are to blame if you haven't placed yourself in a secure position, not made the right decisions, have over spent your income, didn't secure rock solid income(s), did not have mortgage insurance, didn't have backup plans, etc.

I can't believe the number of people who are living from paycheck-to-paycheck, in bliss, in ignorance, not realizing they are a hairs breath from total disaster -- and then cry foul and are surprised when the house-of-cards comes crashing down! The time to have done something about this is long before it happens to you!

I hate to spring the bad news on you, but if you don't have the price of the home you are purchasing in the bank, or in assets you can quickly make liquid, then you probably should not be buying the house. You are just "ripe for the picking." And, next time the criminals want to create a "situation" and take their property back, to resell to the next victim -- they will come for you ... and you will get what you are asking for.

Good solid citizens just don't start families without first having a home, a good income, stability and resources to support children into the same ... and have them in a state of rock solid stability!

If you are talking about a single person ... then maybe a home is not needed ... depends on what they want, and expect, I suppose.

JS

Computers are like fords and chevys ... you will always prefer one over the other, truth is, one will take you where you are going just as well as the other ...

Hey, I am not the one into social standards!

I freely admit that a MAC can do anything a PC can do ... the PC can just do it faster, cheaper and usually better ...

Actually, the problem might be semantics, here.

But, I would like to have my ignorance and false beliefs removed. So, enlighten me, where are the microsoft manufacturing plants which are making these these things -- mice, keyboards, headsets, webcams, even fingerprint readers?

All I am aware of is microsoft lending their name to products which other companies manufacture ... except software, they do produce that, themselves ... they even hire employees to make it, the software.

"The original Zune, released in November, was produced using a framework and components provided by Toshiba Corp. Reindorp said the company hopes that by taking a more direct role in manufacturing a second version, it will help the device gain popularity."

Reading between the lines, it looks like microsoft is just beginning to attempt to enter actual hardware manufacturing ... probably a good idea, for microsoft, since all the jobs and investment money have been moved offshore ... but, probably means a lot more poverty for USA.

And, no, just slapping their name on a product is not manufacturing it, like I say, saying some "is" does not make it true ...

Frankly, I'd like to see microsoft told, "If you make it there, sell it there!" ... and have that applied to their software too. If they want to sell to Americans, they should damn well employ Americans.

JS

I wonder if Fox News will report THIS!

http://www.guardian.co.uk/media/2011/oct/10/campaign-grows-to-oust-murdoch

The shareholder-led campaign for an overhaul of Rupert Murdoch's News Corporation is gathering momentum, with a call from the advisers Institutional Shareholder Services for 13 of the company's 15 directors to be voted off the board.

ISS, whose 1,700 clients include pension funds, trade union funds and asset managers in the United States and around the world, issued a condemnation of the media conglomerate's executive and independent directors on Monday.

It said the phone hacking scandal had "laid bare a striking lack of stewardship and failure of independence by a board whose inability to set a strong tone-at-the-top about unethical business practices has now resulted in enormous costs – financial, legal, regulatory, reputational and opportunity – for the shareholders the board ostensibly serves."

ISS wants the firm's founder, Rupert Murdoch, and his sons James and Lachlan voted off the board at the shareholder meeting on 21 October.

You identify the problem and provide the best solution to solve the problem within the constraints you have to solve the problem.

Linux is not the solution to all problems and neither is Windows the solution to all problems.

A couple of years ago we did deploy a system on Linux because Linux was the best platform to solve the problem.

Legally I own the home, the mortgage company has a lien on the title.
Just like when you buy a car, you own the car but the finance company has a lien on the title.

Why is your life on hold waiting for something that may never happen?

I have heard that the housing market will not recover until 2020.

I will be moving in 3 years, selling my house, and moving to a more tax friendly state. I will not wait for housing values to recover I will sell to whomever comes to me with a pile of money and I will move on with my life.

That was not his point. Consensus is not necessarily truth, nor fact.

And popularity is certainly not dispositive proof of quality. If it were, the Model T would have been the highest quality vehicle of all time.

The post was about which is the better tool. Not about where the largest sale figures post.

Mac's and the Apple operating system were so technologically superior that Apple adopted the i86 processor and borrowed Linux as the core for

In CA, the last big housing hit in the 90's took over 15 years to recover from.

Don't expect this one to be any different.

Actually, BSD is the core of OSX.

You apparently aren't into reading, either. I said nothing about

You still don't see the entire scale of the problem.
The prison is only the 'tip of the iceberg'. But try to imagine all the other negative side effects.

E.g. the addictive person steals a car, for example yours. To get you out off the car, he points a gun at you. Now we have some sort of extreme situation, but lets imagine you are rescued by somebody, that shoots at the criminal.

Now we have a person under shock and a badly injured criminal and the police has a lot of work. The costs here are not only, what all these people earn (policemen, hospital, prison wards, lawyers, ambulance drivers and so forth), but somehow the negative effects on quality of life, what has a value, too.

Streetlife has a value. That is the possibility to use public spaces without fear. If you are afraid of being ripped off, than your possibilities are reduced.

The reduction of personal liberties, due to the 'war on drugs' is also worth to mention.

Then income goes into generally wrong canals, because large revenues are made through means, that are against the society in general. That income attracts young people and guides them away from useful work into drug related 'business'. This money feeds the criminals and let them use that income, to finance other unwanted activities.

E.g. that money enables them, to bribe and corrupt officials, policemen or politicians. These people can do real damage, if they don't function like intended.

I always give everyone (well, at least most) the benefit of the doubt, trouble is, they keep proving me wrong.

For some reason, you just want to argue that microsoft has been a hardware manufacturer ... I think that claim can stand on its' own merit, or not ...

Or, simply, yeah, you said it, I just fail to find any validity in the claim. Man up, if being wrong upsets, just stop being wrong ... attacking others for your problems certain fixes nothing. Flying into a rage, over your own errors, seems insane to me.

And you are only focused on the "negative side effects" and ignore any of the positives

1) Very few addicts bother getting guns. They are too busy using what wealth they have to pay for drugs.
2) Very few addicts do car-jackings. They are far more occupied with scoring and enjoying the high.
3) Why should someone else rescue me, when I can put a bullet in the car-jacking druggie, the moment I get a chance 4) If I pull my gun, I will most likely unload it into the druggie, to make sure he's not a threat any more
5) I may be "in shock" after the shooting, but I'm alive and still have my car.

6) The druggie is dead.
7) The police have little to do except advise the DA that it was a good shoot.
Problem solved

That's only true in your worst-case scenario
IN the alternate scenario with a dead carjacking druggie, the only costs are
1) hauling off the body to the morgue
2) Autopsy
3) police filing a good shoot report
4) buying ammo to replace what was used.

And the reverse, is that if there are armed citizens, street scum are less apt to try to rip off people since the thing they fear the MOST, ABOVE ALL ELSE, is an ARMED CITIZEN

Don't disagree with you there Prohibitions of any kind tend to
1) fail badly
2) result in unintended and usually negative side-effects.

You may not have said the exact words, but if the point that this/these argument(s)/discussion(s), for many, is centering around computers as status symbols and the ownership being regarded, by some, as some kind of social status standard, then I am at a loss for words ... as it seems quite apparent to me.

Indeed, since the argument/statement(s) of MAC supporters has totally ignored the ease of upgrading, the diversity of hardware offered, the abundance of freeware supplied, the ease of codecs to play any possibly imagined media, multiple and numerous apps offered for every possible task/job/use, etc., ON THE PC PLATFORM -- while there is a noticeable lack of these, and only at a notable expense -- obtainable on the apple platform ... all we are left with is the MAC as a status symbol and ego trip ... no one really has to "say anything", one only needs to examine past text in this thread for proof of that statement.

Or, simply, anyone can say anything, in the end, you can just look at it and see what it really is ...

I reread my post, while basically saying what I meant to, I did make some "mistakes in the wording."

I have made some horrible mistakes in life, and paid dearly for them, I lost my first home, and the money invested in it, and had to begin again ...

I am not attempting to "sit a high horse," I had to re-take the class "Life 101" a few times, before getting it close to right ...

Basically, you just keep on keeping on ... and, the group of criminals in the public servant offices are a REAL determent to goals of many citizens and families ... this needs worked on, along the way, with the other problems ... I am sure, although I get older by the day, there are still mistakes awaiting me, in my future, short time, here on the planet ...

Over the course of past employment, I have developed apps/utilities/drivers/codecs/etc. for most platforms ... I have done most on a PC, regardless of the platform they were intended for ...

If the plant had nothing but UNIX machines, I used them -- ... except for my employment in colleges, I have never used a MAC/Apple ... indeed, back in the early 90s I was engaged in a battle to set up a PC lab and allow instructors a choice of Apple or PC in their offices ... at one "Apple biased" college -- thankfully, we "won."

I didn't even address the issue of social status. ReRead carefully. I addressed the issue of the technique of dismissing someone's position as foolish because it doesn't agree with one's own. THAT is a cultural standard, today.

Who owns which computer? Who gives a shit. I have computers running Macintosh, Linux and Windows. Status doesn't enter into it.

Please be more diligent in discerning what someone is saying before you actually attempt to rebut it. It would be nice to engage in a discussion in which you are actually on the same topic.

You need to spend some time with the Macintosh platform. I have applications of every size, purpose, and variation on my business machines. Only a handful of these applications did I have to pay retail for. The rest are all open source share- or free-ware. And all of the installed with a simple drag-and-drop. And all work without difficulty.

Any software application I require is available in many forms, from multiple developers, on the Macintosh platform.

... all we are left with is the MAC as a status symbol and ego

That's a good point. But you should really, again, investigate before you comment.

Your information, is incorrect.

Or just plug a multi-button USB mouse into the Mac; problem solved ;)

(I'll admit that I've done exactly that on my desktop machine - reaching for the Control key when clicking in order to activate context menus gets old fast.)

Yes, we had a rash of "bad cops" which seemed to feed on the illegal drug trade ...

One thing I am positive of, remove the financial rewards surrounding drugs and the "drug problem" would take on a whole new face. It would not be "glamorous", you would not see a punk of gang punks wearing gold chains and presenting dangers, etc.

I am amazed that "the powers which be" can keep on selling failed actions, plans and results while the very thing they are selling is causing massive amounts of crime and death ... obviously, fear mongering is economically a very lucrative business.

I have seen figures which claim ~80%+ of the prison populations are people whose only crime is sales, possession, growing, creating, etc. drugs ... it staggers my mind to even guess how much money could be had by simply closing down 80% of the prisons, and sending 80% of the authorities, court offices, cops, prison guards, etc. home and saving their benefits, medical and perks ...

Certainly it would not be that expensive to start burying the drug addicts which would die. And, it would only be a one time cost!

People who want to pay for this should be allowed to lock up as many as they can afford ... I simply don't want to pay for it anymore ...

Yep, mistakes happen. And different people have different smart choices they make. When someone else makes a different choice than I do about, say, home ownership - that doesn't mean he's dumber than I am - nor that I'm dumber than he is.

And if every generation when it gets as old as I am, observes that the new generations are dumber than we were - that the Right choices were made by my generation (not the previous generations), I figure that maybe this time isn't different. A century or two from now, they won't notice the unique downturn that is so obvious to us.

Apple had the power to start over. It could start over twice to change to better CPUs. And it had the power to switch its core to BSD Unix. Microsoft couldn't do this - it did not control the design of PC compatible computers.

When the environment changed from stand-alone desktop computers to computers connected with the world, Microsoft had to keep tweaking its core system again and again as it had to keep compatibility while making it safe for the new environment. It's like shoring up an existing building to make it earthquake resistant.

Apple didn't need to shore up its OS in the same way. It tore down the old structure and built its OS upon a new core that had been proven to be better designed for connectivity (earthquakes).

These two ways of getting to the same result were necessary because one was a hardware company and the other was a software company.

Funny. And even though we can now right-click with Macs, Windows does that better.

It isn't so much that they are dumber, they just make decision that we wouldn't make.

You do know that there have been UNIX variants running on Intel chips for over 20 years. The first one I encountered was back in 1984. Running on 8086 and another running on 80186's.

Microsoft's OS, DOS, is more akin to the ICE emulators from Intel from around the late 70's and early 80's.

You are forgetting about Novell.

What? I think you need to look up Appletalk. Apple implemented an OSI stack for their Macs, in the early days.

In 1988 I was able to get PC's running UNIX connected to a 10Base2 network. We even had Sun's and DEC's running on the same netwroked all talking to each others. Mac's were somewhat useful because we could use them to do native 68000 development rather than cross compiling.

That isn't my concern - I just don't care for someone saying that someone else is dumb for not making my choice. If a generation doesn't buy homes the way ours did doesn't mean that this generation is dumber than ours.

Which is the point I was trying to make, to a response that said they are dumber because they don't buy houses as much as we did.

I agree with Bocephus, Disney is pure evil. Obama is not involved in the cable TV dust up.

Yep, and you think the Mac is made by Apple?

Hate to tell you but virtually all of the components in an Mac are made by someone else.

The Ipad is no different.

Looks like you are simply looking for something to make an issue of, and ignoring that apple works exactly the same way.

Oddly enough BSD Unix runs just fine on i86 based machines, doesn't it.

Sure. Which has nothing to do with anything I said.

Huh? Again, what has that to do with what I said?

There is an advantage in starting over using tools that other companies have created - such as Unix. Unix has been improved over the years and because it was designed for different purposes, it made a safer core than simply improving the Mac operating system. Or Windows. Since Apple controlled the hardware that its OS used, it had the power to start over.

Maybe Windows had that power, maybe not - but Microsoft didn't go in that direction. It would have lost a lot of customers who wanted backward compatibility. Its primary customers are PC manufacturers.

Apple had to redesign it's architecture to use it's BSD/UNIX clone OS. Microsoft didn't need to since it crafted it's OS to work with what PC makers build.

You imply that only Microsoft has to continually improve it's product.

Instead we have Apple who abandonded previous OS users.

Keep trying - increasingly it does not. Check Apple's rapidly growing market share. More importantly, I can tell you more and more college students in technical fields like science and engineering are using Macs these days. Programming in Matlab, Maple, Mathematica is the norm now, and they all run perfectly on OS X. Plus they get all the benefits of OS X in other applications, too. When these kids hit the job market, the trend will simply continue.

You ever tried to use Vista? I thought not. Microsoft had a choice

Really? Not only do Apple's OS's stay useful much longer than Microsoft's, upward mobility is easy and cheap. We have plenty of folk still content with Tiger.

Usually, no, not even usually, every time I have met a man who owns nothing, says nothing and does nothing, etc., etc., against evil, wrong doing, corruption, graft, etc., etc. and the criminals who would harm others -- that man is nothing.

Pick one, they are usually just the start of all the others ...

BSD is just a much more controlled and closed linux. It is the beginning of the circle which leads right back to MAX os and windows ...

Linux fixes the errors in a close operating system(s), the financial incentives will always be aimed at destroying them ...

We still have 50 year olds which read childrens' books and play with jacks ... of course, most people don't wish retardation on themselves.

But, they do seem quite content, also ...

So OSx is backward compatable with previous Apple OS ?

My snail mail November 2011 Popular Mechanics magazine has an article comparing Apple MacBook Pro vs. HP Pavilion DM4 laptop computers.

In essense, Popular Mechanics magazine says to save your money and buy the Windows computer.It will get the job done.

Get your hands on that magazine and read that article yourself.It might be on the internet right now.

No I didn't.

I'm not getting the connection here.

Times changed from when Windows and Apple's OS were designed for stand-alone computers. What worked best then doesn't work best now.

There are two ways of moving their operating systems to fit our needs, shoring up the existing structure, or tearing down the old system and building a stronger foundation. A better foundation was available for these operating systems (Unix).

Microsoft couldn't take the second option because it had tenants that wouldn't move. Apple only had itself as a tenant, so it could take that option.

So it took longer for Microsoft to modify its OS to be safe in today's connected environment.

Not always. My wife has a couple of games that no longer work with Lion besides her USB floppy drive which we don't use anyway.

Incorrect on both counts.

Greater marketshare meant greater economies of scale for i86 processors.
There was nothing inferior about PowerPC.

And Linux is not used in Mac OS X at all. FreeBSD is a part of its heritage.

Really? Better in what way? Give a concrete example...

Actually, other than needing to buy Apple hardware, there is an abundance of pretty much everything else you mentioned on the Mac OS X platform.

It was an example. But I have the impression, it was at least a little realistic.

BTW: In Germany we don't have 'carjacking'. Didn't know that word, but heard of such crimes.

The reason is a typical German speciality within the system of civil laws, because we have a distinction between ownership ('Eigentum') and possession ('Besitz').
The physical control ('Besitz') doesn't help much, because it is only possession of a stolen car. To get ownership, you need a special certificate of ownership ('Kraftfahrzeugbrief') , what is usually stored in a safe place.

Armed street robbery is not very common here, too. (Actually I don't know the reason for that.)

The term 'cost' is used in economy differently to how the word is commonly used. 'Cost' means the value of the items used in measures of currency.

For example the use of a machine belongs to costs, even if the machine is already paid.

Imagine all the money, the American taxpayer pay. Pile that up in coins.
That is a HUGE pile.

Thats what you have (the American people).

Than you take HUGE caterpillars to grab the money for the military, the various agencies, the government, schools, wellfare, streets and so forth.

What is left isn't a mountain, but still a hill. This is for the nicer things.

If you use money from this pile, than the nicer things are reduced, because that money is spent for something else.

The cost is now not the money spent, but the reduction of things you like.

E.g. a prison adds nothing to pleasure and beauty, but a new - say - stadium would.

Than the cost of that prison is (besides - say - 10 mio $) one stadium.

Actually I think, what they fear most is the pain from having no drugs.
Next is the police and than - maybe - citizens.
Certain drugs reduce the ability to think rational to some extend, what would make such people act like psychos. There is no way to deal with such persons in a rational way. You would need to sedate them -maybe-and take them to a hospital.

Another subject are homeless people. These would possibly fall into your category, too, even if this is quite unfair.

Homeless people are a threat to the public health, because a person needs a shelter and occasional possibility to have a shower (or alike).
A homeless person is not a criminal, but could spread diseases, because the person has to live outside.

>> The reduction of personal liberties, due to the 'war on drugs' is also

> Change of subject noted

Same with such thing as 'liberties'. Liberties certainly belong to the nicer things, you like to have.

If you give up certain rights to achieve a certain effect, than this right, you don't possess any more, belongs to the costs.

If you had to give up the right to - say - ride a horse, than loosing this right reduces your possibilities. You can say: I never rides horses, but some people do. So, the 'pain' of others counts, too.

I'm sure that it's happened a few times.
It's basically someone coming up to you sitting in your car and evicting you forcibly from it to steal your car.

And you presume that we don't understand the differnce ?
If you borrow my car, you have possession of it, while I still remain the owner
In the same way, if you carjack me, you have possession, while I still have ownership.
This is not a concept unique to Germany, bub..

> Armed street robbery is not very common here, too. (Actually I don't know > the reason for that.)

Mostly cultural
In the US most of the street crime is attributed to young black and hispanic males
Although they represent a very small percentage of the population, they have a inordinately high crime rate in just about all the categories. For examples they are 7 times more likely to be murdered and 5 times more likely to commit murder than any other group in US society.
If you take the statistical anomaly that they create in US crime statistics, the US would rank below Canada overall.

Stop being a pontificating dweeb
Most intelligent people know the multiple meanings of the word cost.

That would depend on the design of both the prison and the stadium
And the social benefit of locking up criminals far outweighs the social benefit of a stadium that is empty most of the time.

After all the bullshit about the various meanings of "cost", you forget to consider the various meanings of "benefits" that you confuse presumption with knowledge...

The Prison provides Free Long-Term {Safe} Housing for Criminals 24/7/365 for Years and even Decades. And Thus is an Effective Use of the Public's Money/Resources.
* Removing the Criminals from a lifestyle of Self-Abuse of Drugs and Alcohol
* Removing the Criminals from a lifestyle

of Society  Law-Abiding Good Citizens
* Creating a Safer {Crime Free} Society
* Saving the Lives of Non-Criminals
-note- In Prisons Criminals Only Victimize
'other' Criminals; and not the Good Citizens of Society

Stadiums are NOT an Effective Use of the Public's Money; often they are under-utilized and waste of needed Resources.

Stadiums make Team Owners Rich and make Players Rich : While Denying Safe Free Public Housing to the Poor and Food for Poor Starving Children.

I can tell you that at my large international corporation we are still not embracing Apple on the desktop. We are running Windows and Linux and we will soon be running dumb tubes, throw back to the 70's, on the desktop. There is no reason to put a high dollar, high end computer on everyone's desktop to run e-mail, surfing, and spreadsheets and documents.

We are embracing the iPad primarily because we can use it to get to VMs and because we can run web enabled applications. You can effectively take your desktop anywhere. These are the only two requirements of a "pad" that we need. As soon as something cheaper than the iPad is available we will officially support that and may even provide it to our users.

The desktop only needs to be a tube, keyboard, and mouse with a connection to our network.

You don't understand the concept of economies of scale.

We have two organizations that are allowed to get Apples instead of Windows. One is a company that we purchased that was 100% Apple before we bought them and the other is one of our marketing groups.

Yes there was it cost too much.

What is the real difference between FreeBSD and Linux?

Since Apple switched to a mature operating system as the basis of its software it has stopped throwing the bomb onto the screen.

The move from PowerPC, according Steve Jobs at the MacWorld conference, was driven by the fact that PowerPC would not take Apple to where it needed to be. There would be no G6, not in a timely manner, anyway, because the PPC architecture wouldn't take things there, and Apple needed to bring speed up to compete. PPC processors produced too much heat, which required too much power in cooling, and too much space in the chassis for isolation. And PPC architecture required more power than Apple's goals for battery life would permit.

Smaller, lighter, faster, less power. PPC had to go.

Cost was a minor factor in these decisions.

I had PPC Apple computers. They were fine. Stable, and they were seriously powerful. And my ComEd bill reflected the hours I used them. But when my single core Intel Mini booted from a cold start in one third the time of my twin processor G5 PowerMac, it became pretty clear where the future for Apple Computers was.

That's pretty typical. The first release after a major rewrite is always a disaster

Window 95 - sucked
Windows 98 - ok

Windows 2000 - sucked
Windows XP - ok

Vista - sucked
7 - ok

I predict the next major rewrite (not just an upgrade such as 98 to 98SE) will suck.

Seems to me that Windows XP is still going strong and plenty of folks are still content with it, and it's been out there since October of 2001. With official support of XP is scheduled to end April 2014, that will be a run of about 13.5 years. With existing users probably continuing to use it for several years more.

Indeed of the 5 computers I have, only 2 have Win7 on them, and that was because of hardware/software requirements that mandated Win7.

Meanwhile 'Tiger" only started in April of 2005 and the last security update that included tiger was 2009-005 on Sept 2009, So at this point Apple has ceased support of Tiger.

That's a run of about 4.5 years

Tiger users are now at the point that XP users will be in 4.5 years. (ie 2 years without security support).

Hell at work we are STILL setting up new XP boxes. Much cheaper than Win7, and better performance with cheaper hardware. Win/Win.

Greater economies of scale mean more money for more factories and more
R&D to keep improving.

So why were you making a big issue about Microsoft then?

Why did you make it seem like Microsoft was doing anything different than Apple?

You're the one that seems to feel a relevant difference existed. If you wish to admit now that there isn't then we can simply ignore your comments about Microsoft and move on.

That doesn't fly, and you know why ?
Microsoft buyers wouldn't have to replace their hardware to switch to a Linux based OS.
It runs just fine on the same architecture.

Apple did have to switch.

To this layman the difference there is like variations of Vista or Win7..

Not entirely correct. OS X had been being built for x86 in parallel with PPC for its entire development cycle; Apple had been planning a switch to x86 as far back as MacOS 8 or 9 (I forget which). MacOS 7 had been planned to be the last major PPC/68K release, but they completely convoluted their plans for OS X and had two more interim releases in the shape of 8 and 9 before getting OS X out the door.

And overall OS architecture?

Anyone who thinks that Linux and *BSD are the same thing should also consider Windows and VMS to be the same given the developmental (and other) connections between the two.

Snap in a high end NVIDIA or ATI card into our PC with a high res HD monitor, sit in next to a MAC ... you will see what I mean ... do the same with audio ...

No plug your SDR amateur rig into the USB port of your PC and start using it ... notice that there is no software available for the MAC ...
linux is covered with an app, etc., etc., etc.

Good point. A lot of arguments simply lead the mentally challenged down the path to the "Nazi Death Camp Thinking." Which, very simplistically is, "If they don't think like me, if they don't act like me, if their skin is a different color than mine, if their religion is a different one than mine, if they have wealth I can steal, etc., etc. -- KILL THEM SUCKERS!"

This will always be the solution of criminals, sociopaths, misfits, royalty, those thinking themselves special, etc. ...

Nazi Germany is just waiting to happen again, all over ... it is only creator endowed rights, freedoms, privileges, all men being created equal, etc. which deny that/those evil(s) and hold it/them out the door ...

You mean, like this:

<http://www.nvidia.com/object/product-quadro-4000-mac-us.html>

And with audio, do you mean like this:

<http://www.m-audio.com/products/en_us/ProFireLightbridge.html>

Or this:

<http://www.m-audio.com/products/en_us/Delta1010.html>

Or perhaps this:

You keep putting words in my mouth, seems like I said a PC can do it better ... that was the part you choose to dispute, not the faster, cheaper ... or the fact that PC stays current with uptodate software/codecs/drivers/hardware/firmware ...

Got a comparison to this card for the PC:

No like this.

http://www.geforce.com/Hardware/GPUs/geforce-gtx-590/specifications

CUDA cores 1024 vs 256 for the Mac
Memory 3Gb vs 2 Gb for the Mac
Memory Interface 768 bit vs 256 bit for the Mac Memory Bandwidth 327.7 Gb/s vs 89.6Gb/s for the Mac

<snip>

Like he said, Mac can't compete.

... water blocked and OC'd, of course! And, two matched cards running in SLI mode?

Like I say, ... it is just that PC's can do it faster, cheaper, better ...

Pop two of those puppies in, SLI 'em, water block 'em, over clock 'em, you need ~800 Watts out of the power supply just to run the video cards, meaning you would be wise popping it in a 3/4 server case, extra fans, some fancy lights for the old ego ... etc. probably a minimum 1100 Watt power supply would handle it ... suddenly, you have killer video ...

By my count he has to go back 5 FAMILIES of nvidia cards before he finds one with performance equal or less than what he produced for the Mac.

To spell that out.

GTX 590 - outperforms Mac
GTX 580 - outperforms Mac
GTX 570 - outperforms Mac
GTX 560 - outperforms Mac
GTX 550 - outperforms Mac
GTX 545 - Less performance than Mac

Quadro 4000 - $780
GTX 550 - $130
GTX 590 - $610

Good thing too ... as you will have to "not need a lot of things" when running a MAC! Superior video is just one of them ... if you play video games, you can forget the ones which have no MAC version ...

LOL

And now it comes out: what you want "superior video" for is...

...video games!

There are virtually NO applications which are as demanding as video games on a home PC. Since I contract to develop software, and compiler/linker speeds are important to me, it is worth considering and benchmarking ... however, what am I, one out of 10,000 who runs such a demanding commercial app? So, of course video games become the best universal benchmark -- any child can run them, even if the adults can't ...

However, you are doing the best you can. At this point, your have realized and woken up to reality, and that the MAC is vastly inferior in comparison to even mid range PC's ... when confronted with this reality, and one realizes they have taken a false position, one must switch over to personal attacks on their opposite in the argument ... abandoning any hope of proving their false positions to be correct.

It will also help to lock your mind into denial, and think that no one here will be smart enough to see what is going on, the desperation and desperate tact's you are being forced to take, to believe they will become obfuscated by the false complexities of your diversions ... that they will not notice you switching subjects, points, facts ... etc.

But, I will ... you can make book on that.

JS

That can be easily explained for any number of reasons which DON'T substantiate the hardware and software of MAC being "better."

One which jumps to mind, immediately, a number of people just as ignorant as you have just went out and purchased new computers and have skewed the statistics for a short period, causing a false "blip" on those statistics ...
